OLD BOYS CLUB

P.M. Meet Saves Face, Little Else

By PETER NEWMAN
LONDON — The face-saving communique which ended the seventeenth Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference here
Wednesday
ganization
with a realistic definition of its worth but a questionable potential for its future.

Newman

The inconclusive debates of the last 10 days which managed to fuff up most of the bilateral problems facing the nations involved have defined
the Commonwealth for what it is: a kind of Old Boys Club whose members have little in common except for their club membership and whose most enthusiastic participants are those who find it most difficult to adapt themselves to the adult world outside.

'Here's To Us'

When the British prime minister rose to toast the glittering company, he raised his glass of champagne and

simply said, "To us!" The assembled heads of state,
many of whom had spent the week attacking Wilson's policies, cheered him to a man.

It is this kind of camaraderie, this feeling of belonging, rather than any specific commitment to action that binds the Commonwealth together.

The ephemeral idea that the Commonwealth might become a community of nations
able to interpose itself as an ameliorating "third force"
between the main poles of power in the world has vanished in bubbles of diplomatic doubletalk.

Although the conference's final communique bravely hinted that there had been some degree of unanimity
among the prime ministers who attended, it contained little evidence that any of the participants modified their views or risked a departure from their national self-interests.

Obscure Issues

Canada, which in a sense had the least to lose, led the way in obscuring the real issues without championing initiatives of its own.

Pierre Trudeau's only major speech to his fellow prime ministers (on Jan. 13) was a compilation of homilies such as "the Commonwealth

EXPLODING RAIL CARS LIGHT SKY

SPRINGVILLE, Ala. (UPI)—
A string of burning and derailed railroad tanker cars exploded twice today into 2,000-foot high mushroom-clouds of smoke and flame that lit the northeast Alabama sky and shook houses 30 miles away.
No injuries were reported.

FIRST ROUND in Paris peace talks ends with agreement today that negotiators will sit at round unmarked table Saturday with secretaries sitting at rectangular tables as shown in blackboard drawing. Man taking notes at the Paris briefing is not identified.

Paris Peace Talks Set As Table Hassle Ends

First Session Opens Saturday

PARIS (CP)—The long-stalled Vietnam peace talks
are to begin Saturday, eight months after the preliminary discussions got under way.

With the consent of their allies, the United States
and North Vietnam announced today a breakthrough
in the filibuster about the shape of the table the negotiators will use.

More than two months of haggling over the diplomatic geometry of the enlarged talks—who will sit where—came to an end
when the Americans announced
the terms of the settlement.

The American delegation announced at a news conference
that the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and
the Viet Cong will sit down to bargain at a solid round table flanked at mid-points by two smaller rectangular tables.

There will be a distance of approximately 18 inches separating each of the rectangular tables from the circular table.

The compromise was designed to get around a conflict between the descriptions used by the parties to the talks.

Washington and Saigon call
the talks two-sided while Hanoi
and the Viet Cong insist they are four-sided, thus claiming independent status for the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

NLF NOT RECOGNIZED
The South Vietnamese government in Saigon and the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris
made similar announcements at news conferences.

Chief Hanoi spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le said North Vietnam and the NLF still considered the talks four-sided.

"There will be four independent delegations at the opening meeting," he said. "Each delegation will be equal and independent."

Foreign Minister Tran Chanh
Thanh of South Vietnam made
the announcement in Saigon,
and said there was no change in the U.S. and Saigon government positions on their refusal to recognize the NLF.

VANCE, LAU AGREE
Agreement was reached in dealings between the deputy head of the American delegation, Cyrus Vance, and his North Vietnamese counterpart,
Col. Hau Van Lau.

Vance and Lau, with the agreement of their respective allies, also agreed that there would be no flags or nameplates
inside the conference room and that the American-South Vietnamese side would speak first,
an American spokesman said.

The procedural breakthrough
coming four days before the end of the Johnson administration, represented a major achievement for outgoing American negotiators W. Averell Harriman and Vance.

The talks will get under way
the day before Harriman returns to the United States.

His replacement, Henry Cabot
Lodge, is expected to arrive here several days after president-elect Nixon is inaugurated
Jan. 20.

Johnson Hails Agreement

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson hailed today the Paris agreement on the shape
of a Vietnam conference table
and said that now "new talks on the substance of peace in Southeast Asia can open."

Johnson said the United States should be confident that an honorable settlement in Vietnam will be achieved.

"We are all pleased that certain basic procedural problems
in Paris have been solved and new talks on the substance of peace in Southeast Asia can open," he said in a statement.

Johnson said that three lessons are to be learned from the United States experience since
he announced a cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam.

"First, we must be clear and
firm pursuing with our allies
the limited but vital objectives
we seek in Southeast Asia."

"Second, we must be patient and face the hard fact that fighting is likely to continue as the negotiations are carried forward."

"Third, we should be confident that an honorable peace is possible if we here at home remain steady."

The president, obviously delighted that the way was open
for actual peace negotiations by a decision to seat the rival delegations at a round table in Paris, went on to say that there have been three crises since the preliminary discussions opened in the French capital nine months ago. He said these were on a place for the talks, on terms for the bombing cessation, and on procedures for the new talks.

"In each case," the chief executive said, "patience, firmness and fair-mindedness
achieved a satisfactory result."

Change Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Introduction of the five-day postal delivery week has been postponed to Feb. 17, Postmaster General Eric Kierans announced today. The shorter week was to start Feb. 1.

U.S. TROOP WITHDRAWAL 'POSSIBLE'

SAIGON — Premier Tran
Van Huong believes the United States could begin a gradual troop withdrawal of about 10,000 men a month
without compromising the war, his spokesman said
today.

Bad Driver Crackdown Proposed

Times Legislative Reporter

The provincial government is considering a switch in prosecuting devices which would boost the maximum penalty for driving while licence is suspended from six months to two years.

Attorney-General Leslie
Peterson today indicated such a change may be needed as the keystone to complete the new demerit system for replacing traffic court fines.

Mr. Peterson said his department is considering a policy of prosecuting violators by indictment under the Criminal Code
instead of the present practice
of proceeding by summary conviction.

This would supplement any action taken by the federal government which Mr. Peterson already has urged to seek amendment of the Criminal Code creating mandatory jail sentences for a second conviction of violating a licence suspension.

He said the tough new attitude towards suspended drivers is "essential" if the new demerit system of the Motor Vehicles Branch is to work.

ULTIMATE WEAPON

The system, under trial in the Greater Victoria area as a prelude to province-wide implementation, relies on licence suspensions as the ultimate weapon in weeding out bad drivers.

Instead of charging a driver
in traffic court for any of the
"moving offences" in traffic regulations, violation reports are sent to the Motor Vehicles Branch and a certain number of points results in licence suspension for various periods or a requirement that the driver
take a special course.

"There are far too many drivers today driving while their licences are suspended and jeopardizing the lives of law-abiding citizens," Mr. Peterson said.

"If our new system . . . is to be effective then it is essential that suspensions be invoked and that no one dare to violate those suspensions."

WIRE BRIEFS

Leave Cruise Ship

MIAMI — The 471 passengers aboard the British cruise ship Carmania, which has been stuck on a Bahamian sandbar since Sunday, were being transferred today to another vessel as tugs inched the big ship off the reef.

Woman Terrorized

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Four masked gunmen beat and kicked Washington socialite
Gwen Cadriz in her mansion
Wednesday night and terrorized the household for almost four hours before escaping with cash and jewels which police said might run up to $250,000 in value.

Invaded by Gang

PULLMAN, Wash. — About 25 Negroes wielding shotguns and chains fired several rounds and injured at least three students after breaking into a fraternity house on the Washington State university campus late Wednesday.

Czech Ignites Self

PRAGUE — A 21-year-old student set himself on fire in crowded Wenceslas Square here today. He was rushed to hospital after pouring inflammable liquid over himself and lighting a match. Police are investigating the student's motive for the suicide attempt.

Quebec Renews Bid To Control Baby Bonus

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec today renewed its demands
to take over family allowances from the federal government and proposed higher payments for bigger families
as part of a new payment formula.

Quebec Welfare Minister
Jean-Paul Cloutier also told a federal-provincial welfare ministers' conference that the province feels it should have the final word on programs of social assistance, unemployment
insurance and manpower.

He deplored federal silence on earlier proposals that a continuing intergovernmental conference of welfare and other ministers on social development be set up along with a Canadian council of provincial welfare ministers with a permanent secretariat.

The new family allowance formula should provide bigger payments to families with more than three children, increasing benefits as children grew older,
changes to keep pace with higher living costs, elimination of income tax exemptions for children, and taxation of family allowances.

He said these factors also should be considered in relation to financing the new family allowance plan without increasing taxes and possible withdrawal
of sales tax exemptions on children's wear and transfer of this tax yield to family allowances.

The Cloutier remarks came at the opening of the conference
after federal Health Minister
John Munro said a tight financial situation means welfare programs must be continually renewed to ensure they meet current needs and future requirements.

Mr. Munro emphasized that welfare programs must be administered as effectively and economically as possible.

PROPOSALS CLASH
The Quebec family allowance proposal clashed sharply with federal Health Minister Munro's plan that the conference consider greater selectivity to ensure that benefit payments go to those who really need them.

Mr. Cloutier called for maintenance of a universal family allowance plan, rejecting
"any scheme which would restrict eligibility for benefits to certain families according to income or occupation of the family head."

The two objectives lie behind proposals to be discussed at the conference for special studies of public assistance program development and welfare program
costs.

Mr. Munro said the ministers have another responsibility—to interpret the programs so that government colleagues and the public understand them better.

The growing problem of communicating purpose and delivering service "can be traced to the growing alienation of people
from institutions and the failure of many of our institutions to offer opportunities for meaningful participation."

Mr. Munro told a news conference on the eve of the ministerial meetings that he hopes the provinces will agree to a study
of ways to provide a voice for welfare recipients in the administration of programs.

Russ Pair Spacewalk to Other Craft

MOSCOW (Reuters) —Russia
made giant strides in its race
for the moon today—linking up
two manned satellites, transferring two men through space
from one to the other, and un-linking them again.

It was the first orbital link-up
of two manned craft. The two craft were coupled together for four hours 35 minutes.

The two spacewalkers went from Soyuz 5—a three-man craft launched Wednesday—to join a single cosmonaut aboard
Soyuz 4 which was launched Tuesday.

The two craft linked up earlier today to form what was officially described as the world's first orbiting space station.

An announcement carried by the Soviet news agency Tass
said Lt.-Col. Yevgeny Khronov,
35, and civilian engineer Alexei
Yeliseyev, 35, made their walks separately and were each outside the spacecraft for about an hour.

In the Soyuz 4 half of the station they joined Lt.-Col.
Vladimir Shatalov, 41, who manoeuvred his craft to make the earlier link-up.

The commander of mission,
Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, remained in Soyuz 5.

Both spacecraft have two compartments and are capable of carrying several spacemen.

The Russian word Soyuz
means union and observers considered the link-up a key step in Soviet plans to construct a platform in space that could be used as the starting point of a mission to the moon.

The U.S. Gemini program
achieved linkups only with one manned and one unmanned
ship.

It also was the first time the Soviet Union achieved manual docking, something the United States has already done. The two previous Soviet dockings
were automatic, between unmanned spacecraft.

After the link-up at 11:20 a.m.
(3:20 a.m. EST), Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, captain of the three-man Soyuz 5, took command of the station.

Tass news agency said:
"There was a mutual mechanical coupling of the ships. They were rigidly tightened up and their electrical circuits were connected."

The announcement said everything was functioning normally and telephone communications were established between the two parts of the station.

The preliminary approach of the two ships was controlled
from the ground and satellites were within 100 yards of each other when Shatalov took over manual control.

JOIN OVER USSR

The docking took place during the 34th orbit of Soyuz 4 and the 18th orbit of Soyuz 5. The craft were over the Soviet Union at the time.

Tass said the space station
had four compartments for the crew and "provided for the implementation of a large series of experiments and investigations,
as well as comfortable conditions for work and rest."

The spacemen reported all the station's systems were operating normally and the cosmonauts were feeling well after
this history-making manoeuvre.
The other two men on the sta-

Lt.-Col. Yevgeny Khronov and civilian flight engineer Alexei Yeliseyev.

Khronov was understudy for
Col. Alexei Leonov, who made
the first ever walk in space in March, 1965.

What justified the official description of the two linked craft
as the world's first orbiting experimental space station was not quite clear.

The Russians have in the past
described some of their unmanned craft as space stations.
The two craft now on the way
for Venus landings in May carry this description, as did a Proton research craft launched round the earth at the end of last year.

The link-up was a new step forward in long-announced Soviet plans to construct an orbiting space platform for trips to the moon and other planets.

The new first will do much to boost Soviet space morale; lowered by last month's historic first trip round the moon and back by three U.S. Apollo 8 astronauts.

The official reports did not say how long Soyuz 4 and 5
would be kept locked together.

It's gittin' so space ain't a place y' kin go t' avoid crowds.
Mister Trudeau's findin' thet bein' a prime minister makes y' a prime target.
Too wet fer snow, too cold fer slush—it's snush.

WORLD PEACE was the main topic
when Prime Minister Trudeau today
visited Pope Paul in Rome for a 40-minute audience. Mr. Trudeau also said that the meeting marked the start of bilateral talks toward establishing diplomatic relations between Canada and the Vatican. He added that although the Pope would welcome such an exchange he did not press for it. "We will have to explore Canadian public opinion on this . . .

Roman Catholic and non-Catholic."
Mr. Trudeau, who is Roman Catholic,
asked for and received a special blessing from the Pope and was given papal mementos, including a rosary for his mother.

NATO Backs Naval Force

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — NATO today agreed in principle to create an international naval force in the Mediterranean in the wake of increased Soviet naval activity in the area, informed sources said.

The decision was reached at a closed-door one-day meeting of NATO defence ministers, who also are discussing allied force levels for 1969 and alliance plans for the next five years.

The United States, Britain, Italy, Greece and Turkey will participate in the new NATO naval Mediterranean force, the sources said. A few other details remained to be ironed out.

Latest intelligence estimates available said there were about 33 Soviet vessels currently in the Mediterranean—approximately equally divided between surface vessels, support ships and submarines—one of them nuclear.

But experts believe the Soviet Union will soon step up this number to about 50 vessels, the normal recent Soviet contingent in the Mediterranean.

NATO established an air surveillance command known as Maremed under an American admiral last November to keep Soviet naval activity in the Mediterranean under scrutiny.

GANGLAND SLAYING FEARED

MONTREAL (CP) — Police in neighboring Laval said today they are investigating what they believe to be another gangland slaying.

The frozen, mutilated body of an unidentified man was found Wednesday buried in a snowbank in the suburb, an island in the Riviere des Prairies and the northern mainland.

"All signs point to a gangland execution," Laval police inspector Gilles Poirier said. "His face is so badly cut up that identification is almost impossible."

Former WO Admits 101 Charges

EDMONTON (CP) — Aurele Lucien Belanger, 46, of Edmonton, a former armed forces warrant officer, was sentenced Wednesday in RCMP court to seven years after pleading guilty to 101 charges of possession of stolen property.

Tuesday, the warrant officer's brother, Joseph Clifford Belanger, 43, of Edmonton, also was sentenced to seven years after pleading guilty to 40 similar charges.

Aurele Belanger was further remanded to Jan. 29 to face 45 additional charges of possession of stolen property.

Aurele Belanger was arrested last August following an extensive investigation by armed forces officials and the RCMP. Investigations began in Edmonton and later moved to Quebec where Aurele Belanger has been stationed.

Aurele Belanger was initially charged with possession of a stolen car and a house trailer full of stolen goods. The Crown prosecutor told the court Wednesday, "many of the articles included in the 101 charges were sold by the accused," and estimated the total value at $40,000.

University Chief Dies

PHILADELPHIA—The president of Swarthmore college died of a heart attack today at age 52 as students held control of the college admissions office for the eighth day.

Dr. Courtney Smith died hours before he was to meet with a faculty committee which had been studying demands made by the demonstrators.

Colleagues said the president had been under "a strain" since about 25 Negro students took over the admissions office and demanded a role in policy making.

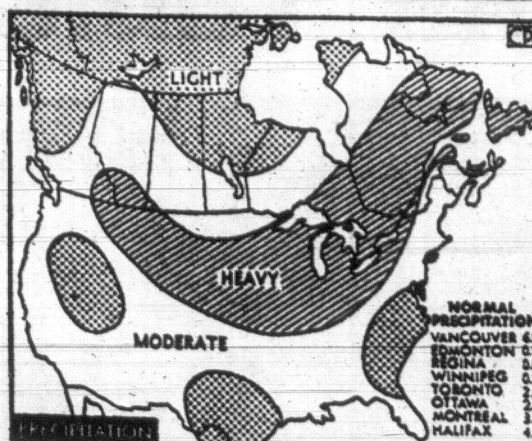

Meanwhile, from New England to California, campuses continued to be troubled by demonstrations, many with racial overtones.

Beny Injured In Jeep Crash

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)—Photographer Roloff Beny is recovering in Colombo, Ceylon, from injuries suffered Dec. 29 when a jeep in which he was riding went out of control in a jungle games preserve.

Mr. Beny, working on a photographic book on Ceylon under a grant from the Canada Council, was thrown against a tree. He suffered two broken ribs and several cuts and bruises.

Mr. Beny's parents live in Lethbridge.

RETURN TO NORMAL weather is forecast for Vancouver Island and the West Coast in the 30-day outlook released Wednesday by the United States weather bureau. However, the rest of Western Canada should continue to suffer below normal weather. (CP Newsmap.)

PM Asked Well, But No Answers

LONDON (CP) — The Sun, in reporting Prime Minister Trudeau's heavy blast against newspaper men for digging into his privacy, says Trudeau's trouble was that he came to London with a "trendy" reputation.

"Critics of his unconventional approach found an easy target in the publicity given to Mr. Trudeau's after-hours activities," writes The Sun's diplomatic reporter, Michael Leapman.

"They said he was not serious and this is what needed him. He is very serious indeed," Leapman says other Commonwealth prime ministers expressed disappointment that Trudeau, with a reputation as a highly original thinker, "had made so scant a contribution to the prime ministers' conference."

"His specialty was asking intelligent questions rather than giving intelligent answers. 'Still, his public speeches did make it clear to some that he was genuinely trying to launch a new style of political debate, avoiding the traditional clichés and discussing issues in realistic terms.'"

SNIDE REMARKS MADE The Spectator, a weekly magazine of political comment, suggests that Trudeau was a disappointment at the Commonwealth conference.

"The decline of his reputation among British officials especially was fascinating to watch. From being cosseted and closed at Chequers at the beginning, Mr. Trudeau became the object of everyone's snide remarks. Mr. Trudeau, it is learned, had fully intended to speak in the debate on the international situation and had actually prepared a speech. He was advised by his officials, however, that it was neither very intelligible nor much to the point. Hence Mr. Trudeau's brief withdrawal to bed with diplomatic 'flu'."

The Spectator says that when he did speak, it was to observe that in politics it is often necessary to accept second- or third-best solutions.

"Some people therefore took him for a philosopher. Other politicians simply remarked that this was a fact they had discovered some time ago."

The Spectator suggests Canada is about to open diplomatic relations with China and that Trudeau was reluctant to see any mention made in the conference communique on Anthony Grey, the Reuters correspondent imprisoned in a room in Peking.

"Probably Mr. Trudeau de-

U.S. Urged to Avoid Post-War Recession

WASHINGTON — A cabinet-level report to President Johnson warns that the United States faces a possible recession when the Vietnam war ends, and urges that the government be ready with an action plan to stop it.

The report, sent to Congress today by the president, said the economy would be subjected to the same deflationary pressures that followed the Korean War.

While not predicting any date for an end to hostilities in Vietnam, the committee of top White House advisers based estimates on an assumption that the transition to peace could be essentially completed by July 1, Clark Clifford, Treasury Secretary Joseph Barr, Commerce Secretary C. R. Smith, Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz, Budget Director Charles J. Zwick and Chairman Arthur M. Okun of the president's council of economic advisers.

1971—in other words, the start of the 1972 fiscal year.

The report said that if the current 10 per cent income surtax is still in effect when the fighting ends, earlier phase-out of the tax could help offset any recession and promote healthy economic growth.

It also urged that a detailed plan to speed up government spending on high priority projects be prepared now to cushion the impact of the transition from a war to peace economy.

The report of the cabinet committee, under preparation since March 1967, carried the signatures of Defence Secretary

Anticipating that the U.S. economy will be generating more than $1,000,000,000 by 1972, the report said the cost of the Vietnam war has been a load for the U.S. economy to carry, and not a prop supporting it.

"Prosperity has not depended on the defence buildup and will not need high military spending to support it in peace time," the report said.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Numerous snow flurries were reported along the coast and throughout the interior overnight. The low pressure area that has remained along the E.C. coast for the past week is still there while cold Arctic air occupies the interior of the province. However, the upper circulation is changing and drier air from the northwest is expected to end the precipitation in most regions on Friday. Temperatures will range from 35 to 40 on the south coast today to zero in the central interior. A fresh pulse of colder air in the Yukon is expected to move into B.C. and temperatures in the central interior will be about 10 degrees colder on Friday.

L.B.J. Sees Prosperity But Warns of Inflation

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Johnson today sent a farewell economic message to Congress which promised Americans a highly prosperous year in 1969.

But he warned that inflation remains a critical problem despite an expected slowing in the economy.

The president insisted that extension of a 10-per-cent income tax surcharge, scheduled to expire June 30, "is essential to safeguard the purchasing power of the dollar and its strength throughout the world."

He formally recommended extension of the tax—passed in June, 1968, to help finance the Vietnam war and restrain a booming economy—in his budget sent to Congress Wednesday.

The tone of the economic report, especially in its references to international economic affairs, was much less sombre than Johnson's 1968 message.

Johnson said: "I have carried out my pledge that the United States would sell gold to official holders of dollars at $35 per ounce."

"There is clearly no need to change that price."

President-elect Nixon said during his campaign, "I see no need for a change" in the gold price—a statement which was considered here and abroad as avoiding specific commitment to maintaining the gold price fixed by the U.S. in 1934.

"Despite a series of gold and currency crises in 1968, Johnson insisted "the international monetary system was strengthened in 1968."

He cited the agreement on creation of "paper gold," special drawing rights in the International Monetary Fund and the two-price gold system set up in March, which Johnson said "is working successfully."

The president implicitly rejected proposals for an international conference in the near future to reform the world payments system.

"The financial crises of 1968 stimulated constructive discussion of many proposals for further evolutionary improvements in the international economy system," Johnson said.

"These proposals are not an agenda for action in a week or a month or even a year. The issues posed can not be resolved in a summit meeting or by a superplan."

The problems, Johnson concluded, "can be tackled effectively with the same kind of careful study and negotiation" that preceded adoption of the paper gold scheme.

He urged that the U.S. "should actively vouchsafe in such a procedure in order to strengthen the foundation of the world economy."

Turning to world trade, Johnson said: "We must not drop our guard against the advocates of protectionism at home and abroad."

N-Arms West Germany Aim?

EAST BERLIN (Reuters) — West Germany is secretly preparing to develop nuclear weapons, eight former West German atomic scientists and engineers said Wednesday.

The scientists—all recent defectors to East Germany—told a news conference here that West Germany is working on several projects meaningless for peaceful purposes but indispensable militarily.

They charged that West Germany is obtaining plutonium without the knowledge of the European atomic agency (Euratom), which is supposed to control its distribution.

WELL UNDER WAY

One scientist said in response to a question that West Germany is co-operating with Israel on atomic research.

Introducing the scientists, Prof. Max Steenbeck, chairman of the East German research council, said there is no concrete proof the Bonn government is actually producing nuclear weapons. But he emphasized that preparations are well under way.

Specifically, Steenbeck charged that West Germany exploited a uranium deposit on its own territory and constructed a plant for the production of plutonium.

He also said it is planning to set up isotope-separation plants, "allegedly for the purpose of producing enriched uranium for its reactors."

A scientist who fled east last month said he spent five years working for a group studying the application of nuclear energy in shipbuilding and shipping. As early as 1961, he said, tests were conducted on a pressurized water reactor. It was officially stated the reactor would be used in mines as a low-power atomic energy plant.

In fact, the reactor was to be used in a submarine developed under the authority of the federal ministry of defence, he said.

Made in Canada

ALTHOUGH IT IS DESCRIBED as an interim arrangement, designed to cover immediate requirements but subject to later negotiation, the agreement between Quebec and Ottawa regarding Canadian representation at a current international conference in the Congo promises to settle the controversy over at least one phase of sovereign entity.

The outcry raised by the Gabon affair of last year is still fresh in mind. Invitations to a French-language educational conference called in that country overstepped Ottawa and were directed only to Quebec provincial officials. Inasmuch as the meeting was an international one, this procedure was seen as an overt snub to Canada's national government and an equally obvious attempt to recognize Quebec as a sovereign power in international dealings. There was reason to believe that support from General de Gaulle had moved Gabon to issue such an invitation. Ottawa eventually demonstrated its displeasure over the premeditated affront by withdrawing diplomatic representation from that country.

The situation had been exploited by the late Premier Daniel Johnson as an encouragement to Quebec nationalism, but Premier Bertrand appears willing to withdraw from that provocative position. His agreement with Prime Minister Trudeau to send Quebec representatives as part of a Canadian delegation — even though they will be specifically identified as from Quebec — goes a long way to heal the breach and restore the sense of unity which is essential for the proper conduct of Canadian affairs. Although the settlement is expressly couched in terms of the forthcoming conference only, it gives promise that an equally acceptable permanent arrangement may be fashioned at a future federal-provincial meeting. This is a relief, for there can be no compromise on the basic fact that the federal government can be the only spokesman for Canada, and that dealings with other national capitals, no matter how they may be later delegated to spokesmen from Quebec, must be on a national and not a provincial level.

Post Your Ballot?

LESS THAN 40 PER CENT OF the eligible voters cast ballots in Monday's provincial by-election in Burnaby-Willington riding. That is about par for a byelection; the figure is even lower in most municipal votes. Everyone seems to agree this is not the best way to run a democracy, but seldom is anything done about the problem beyond clucks of disappointment.

Now New Zealand has come up with an idea so simple it is surprising no one has tried it out before: let the people mail in their ballots. For one reason or another many voters are unable or unwilling to take the time and effort to reach a central polling place. Whether or not this attitude toward their obligations as citizens is praiseworthy, it exists.

The experience in New Zealand has been that a sufficient number of people who otherwise would not vote will take the trouble to mail in ballots. In no case where the system has been tested did the turnout drop with the introduction of postal voting.

The average turnout was in the high 80-per-cent bracket, compared with an average of about 50 per cent in the same districts three years previously. One county reported a rise to 89 per cent from 31 per cent, with local issues and candidates almost identical on the two occasions. That kind of turnout gives the winning candidate confidence that he represents an actual majority of his constituents instead of a small percentage.

It has been predicted that in the future citizens will vote in their homes by means of electronic gadgetry. Use of the mails, with adequate safeguards, could become an interim system to encourage fuller, more convenient participation in community decision-making.

Financing Graduate Students

REPLIES TO QUESTIONNAIRES sent out to this province's universities place the annual financial needs of an unmarried graduate student seeking a higher degree at from $3,000 to $3,500 a year. Married graduate students with one or more dependents reportedly require from $4,000 to $4,500. The figures are considered realistic for those who are doing advanced degree work over the full 12 months, not merely the conventional seven months of the undergraduate year.

Many graduate students receive financial support from fellowships and bursaries. But according to an unofficial estimate and projection, about half the 240 graduate students expected at the University of Victoria next year will require other help. Some will receive no fellowship or bursary, others will require supplementary financing to maintain them for the year's study. If the latter can find gainful employment — and some of them will on campus in departments which have sufficient financial elbowroom to hire graduate assistants — they may acquire sufficient income to carry them. If they do not they presumably will have to borrow.

If Canada and British Columbia are to develop the talents of students capable of earning master's or doctor's degrees, it seems sensible to expand present student loan arrangements at minimal interest rates in the graduate field. Such investments should be completely sound. Graduate students deserve encouragement, and once they receive their parchments they almost automatically move into a higher earning bracket where their ability to repay is almost assured.

The whole question of student loans needs further action by provincial and federal authorities at an early date. Failure to stimulate production of more highly educated students would represent neglect of a vital resource for which the nation and the province would pay a substantial price in the future.

Jilting Milady Nicotine

PRESSURES EXERTED BY health agencies against the tobacco industry have apparently been effective, though not dramatically, in cutting down consumption in the United States. Last year, a reputable national magazine reports, sales of American cigarettes dropped to 526.5 billion compared with 527.8 billion in 1967.

But if gross consumption has fallen only fractionally, more positive gains have been recorded in other areas. One expert estimates that 1.5 million fewer Americans were smoking last year than the year before, although population increase placed another 3 million in the age bracket usually considered to be the smoking age.

Perhaps most significant of all, the number of teenagers taking up the habit is dropping more quickly than any other group of the population, a mere 3 per cent of high school students have indicated their probable use of tobacco in the next five years. If the nation which made the cigarette a glamorized symbol of sophistication is demonstrating this trend, the outlook elsewhere in the world should be encouraging.

THE 'WASA' OF SWEDEN

Solving Mysteries of the King's Ship

By MAURICE WESTERN

IN CONTRAST to the British and Canadians, who build replicas of such famous vessels as the Nonsuch and Blenheim, the Scandinavians dig the originals from hill-sides or raise them from the Baltic sludge. Thus Oslo has its Viking ships and Stockholm the Wasa, an unhappy vessel which sailed proudly for the German wars and reached her first port, to be saluted by her own guns, 333 years too late.

Western

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the Wasa is deservedly the first tourist attraction in Stockholm. There is still some mystery about her and, of course, a fascinating story of recovery and restoration, of which the Swedes have every right to be proud. But she is of even greater interest if viewed in a wider-than-Scandinavian context.

Gustavus Adolphus issued orders for the construction of his flagship in 1625. This was less than 40 years after the English victory over the Spanish Armada, and builders at that time were relatively free of the modern worry over the pace of technological change. So the Wasa, now resurrected from her Baltic grave, must be very like the warships which met in the Channel at one of the decisive moments in history.

Formidable, Impressive

She was no tiny vessel like the Nonsuch. Even now, partially dismantled in her temporary dock, she conveys the impression of a ship formidable in her time. From figurehead to stern, she was about 190 feet; her mainmast rose 150 feet above the keel and she displaced 1,400 tons. When she moved down the Stockholm archipelago, her immediate destination was a north shore port at which she was to pick up reinforcements for the army in Prussia. Unfortunately for the king, she was caught in a squall, capsized and soon disappeared utterly from the eyes of men, although not from the memory of puzzled historians, for more than three centuries.

At that time, and for some years afterwards the location of the wreck was known, and the Swedes, who still had a series of wars on their hands, contrived with primitive diving devices to salvage 53 of her 64 bronze cannon. But then the curtain fell with apparent finality.

The reappearance of the Wasa was made possible by a chance discovery in the Swedish archives. Profiting by this clue, Anders Franzen located the wreck in 1956. He persuaded numbers of interested citizens, including the king, that a salvage operation was feasible. But there remained an important unanswered question. What would happen to the Wasa's ancient timbers on re-exposure to the air? If she could be successfully raised, could she be preserved or would she be destroyed by the action of drying and moulds?

Underwater Tow

It was a strange operation. As the Wasa lay 110 feet below the surface, she had to be towed underwater to a point offshore at which she could be brought up and pumped out. After this, with the assistance of the salvage fleet, she was able to continue the journey, interrupted in 1628, on her own keel.

Ever since then she has been subjected to a continuous rain of plastic spray which by 1971, it is hoped, will permeate the wood as to permit the Wasa thereafter to defy the agents of disintegration.

Once preservation is assured, the Swedes will turn to restoration. For the Wasa at the moment is a rugged hulk, bereft of the artwork (much of it in adjoining rooms) which once made her an odd composite of beauty and menace. The 17th century had its own ideas of psychological warfare. Shipwrights hired carpenters; they also employed the best sculptors that royal patronage could lure into service. (Small wonder that the Wasa took three years to build.) A king's ship was literally covered with rich adornments, most of them heroic in size. The greatest concentration was about the sterncastle but there was also, over every gunport, a snarling lion's head, intended, no doubt, to convey an impression of suitable ferocity to potential enemies.

Art served other purposes. It displayed the vast resources commanded by the king; perhaps also his credentials as a patron of learning, since the carvings are inspired mainly by themes of ancient mythology. One represents Hercules with the watchdog, Cerberus; another Nereus, the sea god; another Bacchus, and so on. Objects were sometimes included for superstitious reasons, since it was thought (evidently there was miscalculation in the case of the Wasa) that they would ward off perils of the deep.

Inspirational Sculpture

Another suggestion is that the sculptures were intended to inspire the crew not merely to courage but also to obedience. Seamen were impressed in those days and may not always have glowed with spontaneous enthusiasm for the royal cause.

The carvings were bolted to the hull and accordingly soon fell away as the metal rusted to powder. Many of them have been recovered and some have been temporarily reassembled in a separate exhibit to give some idea of the majesty once displayed.

The extent of the recoveries is remarkable; some 26,000 separate finds, including carpenters' tools (less the metal parts), chests, coins, personal equipment, items of clothing, the captain's table with accessories, remains of food including a butter dish with contents, there was also a flask of spirits, identified by the scientists as rum in good condition. What happened to this after scientific verification is a Swedish state secret.

As a result of all this investigation, more than three centuries after the event, the mystery of the Wasa has been partially solved. It is evident that she was unstable and over-armed although she shared these faults with many other ships of the time. But another interesting fact has been established. Her ballast, which consisted of rock, has been recovered, weighed and found to total only about one-third of that which she ought to have carried on a sea voyage. For want of some rocks the king's ship foundered. Who was at fault and why remains unknown.

FROM WASHINGTON

By F. MANKIEWICZ AND T. BRADEN

The Coming Crunch for "Nice Guy" Ted

NOTHING has yet marred the political prediction of John F. Kennedy that "my brother Teddy is the best natural politician in the family." But there are serious crunches ahead. One of them is coming up soon in California.

There, Ted Kennedy's closest friend and law school roommate, Congressman John Tunney, has decided to take on incumbent George Murphy for a seat in the U.S. Senate. The Tunney decision may force Kennedy to choose between a friend and a political ally.

For Tunney has decided to run in full knowledge of the possibility that Jesse Unruh, former speaker of the California Assembly, may opt for the same race. Unruh has been getting ready to run against Ronald Reagan for governor in 1970, but he has long regarded the Senate seat as an option. As time grows shorter, the option looks better.

Indebted to Unruh

Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco, also eyeing the Democratic nomination for governor, shows no sign of backing down. Moreover, the troubles of San Francisco State College are making Reagan into "the good guy" for California TV audiences. Unruh has long been on the scene without running for statewide office. He must run this time, and he will clearly want to run in a race which he thinks he can win.

Should he decide on the Senate race, Unruh has every reason to count on Kennedy support. He earned it by managing campaigns for John Kennedy in 1960 and Robert Kennedy in 1968. He would not expect to find a Kennedy in his way.

Yet this could happen. It was Ted Kennedy who helped put Tunney into his first congressional campaign, and it was Ted Kennedy who called friends to his Virginia home recently to provide Tunney with a list of California people who might be helpful to him in a race for the Senate.

'Practical Thing'

In a showdown between Unruh and Tunney, it is by no means certain that Kennedy will do the "practical" thing.

The practical thing would be to stay out of it. Unruh has the organization, the statewide name and the prior claim for political support. "The policy is to stay out of primaries," said one Kennedy aide, "but Tunney is Teddy's best friend. Where Tunney is concerned, I can't vouch for policy."

The answer tells a lot about the kind of politician Ted Kennedy is and the kind of figure he will cut during the Nixon years.

For "the best natural politician in the family" is in some ways not like a politician at all. He is not canny as his brother John was canny, nor tough in the political sense that his brother Robert was tough. Faced with a possible conflict between a powerful politician and a friend, either of his brothers might have worked to prevent a showdown. Neither would have wanted to be drawn into the contest.

Teddy is different. And the difference provides the clue to what his older brother meant when he called him "the best natural politician." Teddy is congenial, more so than either of his brothers. The phrase "nice guy" would have demeaned John and stuck in the throat of anyone trying to describe Robert. But it seems as natural when applied to Teddy as it is natural for a nice guy to support his friends.

Best Politics

It may be that natural politics is the best politics. Teddy's friend Tunney is young, vigorous, intelligent and new. He has determination, an evocative name and money. If he has to take on Unruh, California voters — always susceptible to a fresh face — might well set a pattern for the change to youth and vigor which Kennedy will be trying to establish during the next four years.

But a natural politician is not necessarily a successful one. Tunney is unknown, as compared to Unruh. He affords no campaign platform for a Kennedy as Unruh does. At 36, Ted Kennedy has not had to face such tough choices as now loom. Nor has it been necessary perhaps for him to reflect upon the wisdom of Emerson on friendship: "The condition which high friendship demands is the ability to do without it."

A PERSON IS . . .

A person, in Kosterin's idea, is a thinking being. Therefore, nature has given to him a striving for knowledge, that is, for critically evaluating reality, drawing one's own conclusions and freely stating one's convictions and opinions. For this, he was terribly hated by those who believe that people exist to create a backdrop for leaders, to applaud and shout "hurrah" for them, to believe in them blindly, to pray for them, to endure without murmur all scorn of themselves and to quack with pleasure when into his trough they pour more and richer fodder than into the other troughs.

—From the eulogy by Major General Piotr Grigorenko, Russian critic, at the recent funeral of Aleksei Kosterin, Soviet writer and critic of the regime.

Looking Back

From the Times, Jan. 16, 1969.

For a long time it has been felt that something should be done to improve the acoustic properties of the legislative chamber before the legislature opens on Monday. Members farthest removed from the speaker find it difficult to hear debates. As an improvement, curtains will be hung about the walls. These are being strung just below the rail of the public galleries.

REITH LECTURES—4

Guilt Feeling Confuses Aid

By LESTER B. PEARSON

Many people in the West are afflicted with a sense of guilt in their relationship with the hungry and impoverished millions of Africa and Asia.

They accept the reproach—or they are influenced by it unconsciously—that materially backward people are somehow backward because we have abused and oppressed them and that we can ease our consciences by helping them to "live better electrically," to put it in the most naive terms.

It is a generous-hearted response and it expresses a desire to act in the Christian tradition.

It may have justification in some cases but unfortunately it is often muddled, in its history, its economics and its ethics.

Implies Obligation

At times it is not much more helpful than the attitude of the hard-faced persons who simply reject any obligation to help anybody but themselves.

It has always seemed to me a somewhat limited interpretation of Christianity which implies an obligation to the less fortunate because we may have done them harm; or to murmur "mea culpa" to justify a good deed.

But this confused attitude in the West has its corollary in another that we often meet at the receiving end.

Nationalism in former colonies is possessed with a sense of economic as well as political grievance: a resentment against exploitation, real or imaginary, which too often takes the attention of national leaders off the real problem.

If there is little or no economic progress after the transfer of power, the new leaders can go on explaining away their failure for years as the legacy of imperialism. This obscures the essential but sometimes bitter truth that independence and sovereignty, like patriotism, is not enough.

Feeling Persists

It is so easy to argue that since the poverty was caused by the "imperialists" it is their responsibility now to help in removing economic difficulties by subsidizing the country for years to come; and this might achieve good results, even when it's not justified, if it led to co-operation between the new nation and its former "exploiters."

But if the feeling of grievance and bitterness persists it will make collaboration very difficult. "Good riddance" and "please help" are not easily reconcilable.

Private investment, which can be a fruitful way of promoting economic development, is frightened off, and Western taxpayers are discouraged by the resentment of the people they are trying to help.

Ultimately, the new nation may find that the easiest way to assure a flow of funds is to exploit its cold war nuisance value and get competitive political bids from both sides, which makes for suspicion and tension rather than co-operation.

In approaching these difficult and sensitive problems,

we need to abandon two facile assumptions.

The first is that the difficulties that undoubtedly exist between rich and poor nations are the product of poverty alone, and can be dispelled by filling bellies and dental cavities.

The second is the assumption that the masses in these poor countries want no part of our materialist civilization with its supermarkets and its psychiatric clinics; that they would be content to live as they have for centuries in their natural state of happy innocence, and poverty, if only leaders with Oxford or Columbia degrees would not stir them up.

Even if this were true, it is irrelevant. For most of the materially poorer peoples now know about the rest of the world and they know that disease and hunger and deprivation are not inevitable.

They know that man can live up to seventy instead of thirty-five. Even in the most remote parts of the world people have now learned something about the technological society; where there are gadgets to make life more comfortable, and more exciting.

Leaders Want Them

But even if there is a country somewhere whose people do not know, or do not want, the material benefits of Western civilization, certainly their leaders do want them nationally, and these are the ones we have to deal with.

And they want much more than food and hospitals. They want freedom and power; power to help their people or to pursue their own ambitions; or both.

We can't ignore them or the political and economic ideas we ourselves have implanted in their minds by precept and example.

Nor can we expect them to be calm and contented merely by our assurance that, as the white man has already done much, he will do more to help improve the lot of the non-white people. Dr. Schweitzer is no longer enough. People are proud and sensitive. The spirit in which help is offered is as important as the help itself.

Self-Defeating

Nothing could be more self-defeating—less effective in promoting peace and goodwill—than attaching political or social conditions to our aid; to say we will help, not all of those that help themselves, but only those that support us and believe in our political and economic system.

We must not even exclude revolutionary movements and governments from our co-operative help; or assume automatically that every outburst of revolutionary nationalism is Communist, and therefore hostile to the West.

We must accept the fact that in many countries where people live in misery and distress revolution may seem to them to be the only way out; and that Communism has nothing to do with it.

Learning should be fun

Let's Have Joy In the Classroom

By DOROTHY RICH

Many critics say schools are teaching subjects that are already obsolete, instead of concentrating on developing the student's general, critical intelligence.

Sharpening a youngster's mind isn't the answer, says George Leonard in his recently published "Education and Ecstasy." (Delacorte Press, $5.95.)

Leonard blasts the educators for their obsession with just the student's mind. He calls for education that involves the total youngster: his emotions, his senses, the whole body, not just the neck up.

And worse, says Leonard, schools have been filling children's brains with facts but have been turning out people ignorant of their own feelings and bodies.

Leonard is a magazine writer and one of the founders of Esalen, an experimental psychological institute in Big Sur, Calif. Here people meet together in "encounter" groups and go through physical and emotional experiences with the aim of breaking through human barriers and thus achieving joy.

Joy—that's the key idea in Leonard's book. In his reporting on education, he has seen little joy in our classrooms.

In the 21st century, with its increased automation and leisure time, our children will no longer have to struggle just to survive.

They will have the opportunity, explains Leonard, to find out what it really means to be human. They will be able to search for joy. The society that is emerging, says Leonard, will require lifelong learning, to have something akin to unity in so far as each person's potential can attain.

Homes and schools will have to get busy now to prepare children for this life.

For schools, Leonard proposes that once a child has learned his basis three R's (joyfully) he should spend the bulk of his schooltime thereafter in free-learning situations where materials are set out and he moves through them on his own. Most schooltime now is wasted, says Leonard, on dull repetition and meaningless required subjects.

Leonard admits that if he could legally keep his own children out of school he would. He quotes educational programmer, M. W. Sullivan: "School is a terrible thing to do to kids: it's cruel, unnatural and unnecessary."

Sullivan believes it would be a lot easier, cheaper and better for the child to ship learning materials to the home rather than ship bodies to the school.

Leonard's children do go off the school. He has, however, set up a "free-learning environment" for them in his home, an idea he urges on other parents.

In his dining-room he has provided workbooks, musical instruments, books and just plain junk that his children can use on their own. He cautions parents to resist becoming "teachers"; instead, he says they should introduce new materials that stretch but don't lose the child.

George Leonard is not a teacher, and his book is an uneven work, really a collection of his magazine articles. Most conventional educators would agree with what Leonard wants for children, though there probably would be disagreement about his methods.

What Leonard has said that needs saying, especially today when education is such a grimly serious business, is that children ought to be able to take delight in learning. His message is joy—and with that no one can disagree.

'Delights of Indecision' Becoming Trudeau Habit?

LONDON — The Canadian general election gave Mr. Pierre Trudeau's new government the clear parliamentary majority that his predecessor, Mr. Pearson, had never enjoyed during his five years as Liberal prime minister. And this was very largely a personal vote for Mr. Trudeau himself.

Bursting into federal politics with the speed and brightness of a comet, he had captured a remarkable amount of popular enthusiasm — by no means only among young Canadians — and "Trudeaumania" was as important a factor in resuscitating the Liberal party in the western provinces as it was in restoring the party's fortunes in Quebec.

Canadians have observed and discussed his personality with more fascination than they usually accord to any political figure. But they are still apt to admit that they find him something of an enigma.

Now that he is in London for the Commonwealth prime ministers' meeting, the British are getting their first close look at this very unusual man.

A correspondent's comment on his role in the Commonwealth talks suggests that, however vivid an impact Mr. Trudeau may make during this visit, people here are not likely to penetrate in a few days the mysteries that have baffled Canadians for as many months. Canada's prime minister will no doubt leave London with the reputation of an agile and rather exciting sphinx.

Will Need Agility

His talent for exciting has already proved its political value. The agility will still be needed for some considerable time. It is on the sphinx bit that doubts must centre. That particular bit is not really in character.

Before he became prime minister, Mr. Trudeau won a reputation for knowing and speaking his mind, whether as a campaigner against the corrupting influences of the Duplessis regime in Quebec or as a vigorously reforming federal minister of justice.

And he has not ceased to say certain things loud and clear, or to act accordingly.

He still has a primary message for French Canadians: that a reformed federalism offers them far more than a defensive and obscurantist nationalism.

And one for other Canadians: that the survival of confederation still requires great efforts, which are not to be seen as merely amounting to the appeasement of Quebec, but as involving a very broad restoration and strengthening of Canadians' individual and group rights.

To all Canadians, he has also been obliged by this year's economic circumstances to spell out some painful truths about curbing wage increases and government spending, and introducing new taxation.

It is in the field of international relations that he has had most resort to the noncommittal. When he took office in April he announced that a wide-ranging review of Canada's whole foreign policy would at once be undertaken.

Then and since then he has given various indications of his personal thinking on these matters, but has repeatedly insisted that firm decisions about any major foreign policy changes must await the outcome of the general review, which is not yet completed.

When questioned he has felt free to discourse at length about his personal inclinations without necessarily pursuing his lines of thought to definite conclusions in terms of diplomatic or other action.

When asked if his remarks pointed to any particular action, he has stuck to the argument that nothing would be decided until completion of the foreign policy review (which of course includes defence).

When other members of the government—notably Mr. Eric Kierans, the postmaster-general—have indulged in setting out their own thoughts about international issues, Mr. Trudeau has tended to suggest that it matters little what ministers may say now, so long as they will be bound by the government's decisions.

All this makes for lively discussion; it is compatible with Mr. Trudeau's wish for greater public participation in policy-making; and it has the tactical merit that it further baffles an already baffled parliamentary opposition which cannot mount much of an attack on the government's foreign policy until it finds out what that policy is going to be.

Mr. Trudeau coolly sets out first one argument, and then another, and notes the reactions with an air of studious interest. Thus, he first hints that Canada might cut back on its role in NATO and concentrate on its share in the air defence of North America. A little later, he warns that this would involve greater, not smaller, expenditures.

On both the Nigerian and the Rhodesian question he and his external affairs minister, Mr. Mitchell Sharp, have indicated apparent positions and then seemed to change them.

There has been a tremendous show of new interest in Latin America, involving extensive journeys by no less than five ministers; Mr. Trudeau himself has stressed the importance of both China and Japan; but what it all adds up to is still uncertain.

There is no doubt that light and air needed to be let into the Canadian discussion of external policy. Mr. Trudeau has shown a sensitive awareness of the restive feeling that has spread across the country after a long period during which Canadians had come to take it for granted that their contributions to international activity would be taken for granted by other nations.

New Mood Cooler

This is not just a matter of staging a pugnacious defiance of the United States, in the style that Mr. Diefenbaker tended to lapse into. The new mood is something much cooler.

Mr. Trudeau's Canada is in effect announcing that it means to look over certain policy that may, it feels, have been retained largely because they suited the Americans, or the British, or somebody, and see whether they really suit the Canadians.

It is all quite rational, in the abstract. Whether the pressure of actual events will allow even a country as geographically protected as Canada to succeed in such a superbly detached experiment is another matter.

Nine months is a fair gestation period for anybody's foreign policy, and Mr. Trudeau had better start producing some soon.

For other countries, it has been a salutary experience to find themselves, just for once, wondering what those long taken-for-granted Canadians might do.

For Canada, however, there is the danger that the delights of indecision (and its possible financial advantages) might prove habit-forming.

At a certain point the impressive image of the sphinx might be replaced by that of a country that had ceased to be able to make up its mind.

Scientists Unable to Halt Spread of Elm Tree Killer

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Throughout many parts of eastern United States and Canada elm trees stand stark and leafless, their distinctive upward-reaching shape a characteristic of the landscape. At this time of the year they are a normal part of the scene but unfortunately most of them remain in this condition when they should be leafing out as other trees in the area.

These are the victims of Dutch elm disease which has been sweeping across parts of North America in recent years despite intensive efforts of a host of scientists bent on checking its spread.

The cause of the trouble is a fungus which was accidentally imported on wood from Europe during the First World War when an urgency developed for materials to be used in the manufacture of crates and furniture. The spores of the fungus are actually carried in the bristles of bark-beetles which are capable of flying from tree to tree.

The beetles feed on the tender bark in the crotches of young shoots making a wound through which the fungus spores can enter. Once they are lodged in the sap stream the spores germinate to produce great masses of tissue which block the vessels within the tree, cutting off nourishment to all parts.

Such an infected tree is doomed; it may die slowly branch by branch over a period of a year or so or it may succumb within a few weeks.

In the meantime, the beetles have continued to breed within the dying tree and the next generation of adults carry with them a further supply of spores to infect any other elm tree upon which they may land.

Apparently no species of elm is immune to attack. On this continent it is the widespread American elm for which the greatest concern has been felt. In 1933 the disease was first recognized as a serious menace in the United States but it was only in relatively recent years that various agencies have made efforts to control its spread.

Despite the wide use of sprays and other methods of control Dutch elm disease has spread over most of the areas in which elms grow and more than a million trees are dying each year.

At this rate it has been calculated that American elms will be extinct within the next generation if the disease is not quickly brought under control. Elm Research Institute, a national agency, has been established in the States to cope with the threat and a new plan of attack has been outlined.

During the past few years most programs have been devoted to spraying trees to control the beetles that spread the disease but now that this procedure has proved to be ineffective other plans are being tried.

Most promising at present is the propagation of disease-resistant strains of elms for replanting in the devastated areas — a slow process but one in which the United States government is actively engaged.

Elms are not native to British Columbia but a number of them have been introduced as boulevard trees or as ornamentals. In Victoria there are a few English elms in various parts of the city, mostly along Dallas Road where they seem to be more resistant to salt spray than other boulevard trees.

However, authorities are not too concerned over the possibility of local trees becoming infected; the nearest diseased trees are in Boise, Idaho and since the intervening area is beyond the normal range of elms the likelihood of spores being carried to Vancouver Island by insects or by other means is extremely remote.

Nuclear Club May Mushroom on Nixon

By ARCH MACKENZIE
WASHINGTON (CP) — Recurring reports that Israel is preparing to produce its own atomic weapons point up a dilemma that President-elect Nixon must reconcile with his go-slow attitude so far toward United States approval of the treaty to curb the spread of nuclear arms beyond the existing five countries who have them.

Israel is one of the five so-called "threshold" countries — West Germany, India, Japan and Switzerland are the others — generally considered to be close to the ability to produce nuclear arms. Israel last week denied a National Broadcasting Company report that it now has or soon will have nuclear weapons. But one qualified source here said it is understood that Israel, originally with some French help, had embarked on establishing the production of plutonium from uranium which could be stockpiled for nuclear arms.

Eighty-four countries have signed the treaty to curb the spread of nuclear arms but only six have ratified it. Canada last week became the fifth to do so. Senator J. W. Fulbright of the foreign relations committee — which would do the U.S. spadework on ratification — said it is not an immediate subject on his committee's agenda.

Dragging Heels

To take effect, the treaty has to be ratified by 40 countries, including the U.S., the Soviet Union and Britain. Only Britain of the three has ratified so far.

President Johnson had hoped to cap his final days in the White House with ratification but that won't happen now.

He warned Oct. 11 that "if we do not proceed to ratify this treaty promptly, the forces at work against it in other countries will quickly gain strength."

He may be right since West Germany, India and Israel are among those countries who for various reasons have dragged their heels on ratification.

Meanwhile, informants here say, the nuclear club of the U.S., U.S.S.R., Britain, France and China could be expanded by 1972 if not before.

The necessary knowledge to convert nuclear energy from peaceful uses to war arsenals has been broadly spread around by the U.S. and by Canada, it is contended.

The background briefing for correspondents here last week was told by one non-government authority that Canadian-built reactors give other countries the greater opportunity to break into the nuclear club.

Not Foolproof

This was so, despite Canadian safeguards, because Canadian nuclear reactors sold abroad use natural or non-enriched uranium. American reactors "burn" enriched uranium bars that have to be reprocessed in the U.S. after use and checks can be maintained on whether they have been operated at the high rate of "burn" required to turn out the plutonium for nuclear arms.

The Canadian view is that it safeguards the use of the reactors it has sold to India and Pakistan, for example, by ensuring inspection rights. India's reactor coming into operation in 1972 will also be inspected by the United Nations atomic agency.

The background session for correspondents was informed that the technical improvements being made in the next stage of reactors — so-called fast-breeder reactors — will vastly increase the amount of plutonium that can be turned out and, without any international curb, stockpiled for nuclear arms use.

Japan was cited as a country purposely waiting for the new reactors to be developed and getting into the nuclear energy field in a major way.

Dear Mr. Smith:

It is not clear from your letter whether you represent management or labour. Either way, however, DBS information is widely used to analyze wage and salary levels and, in many cases, for escalation clauses in wage agreements in accordance with the movement of wages and salary levels and of prices as measured by DBS.

DBS records and publishes monthly wage and salary information by industries and by regions and selected cities of Canada which provides trends of wage and salary levels. The Department of Labour in Ottawa can supply wage-rate information for specific occupations and other data.

A new DBS study of "Employer Labour Costs" in the manufacturing industries may be particularly useful. It identifies the items making up the total wage package, with provincial comparisons and detailing industries.

We'd be pleased to include you as a regular subscriber to our reports on employment and prices, if you wish. Sample copies of these and related publications are enclosed.

DBS information can help you make profitable business decisions.

No matter what you sell or how big, or small, your business is, DBS statistics can help you define the size of your market, your share of the market and its growth prospects... make comparisons of your own operating results, costs and profits with those of your business or industry as a whole... analyze product trends, prices and wages... indicate import competition and export opportunities... help determine where best to locate that new plant, new store or new branch — and much more. # How to avoid "motor fatigue" — with one of our special $17.88* electronic tune-ups.

If your car has been a little temperamental lately it may be showing the early signs of "motor fatigue". Hard starting, poor performance, stalling, high gas consumption — these are the minor symptoms that can deteriorate into real trouble. Fortunately, there's an inexpensive cure. It's our 26 stage "minor" motor tune-up — the most comprehensive available. The program is administered by a highly skilled and qualified technician. He's assisted by an electronic helper known as AMA-Mk 9 (Atlas Motor Analyser, Mark 9). Each of our "minor" tune-ups is guaranteed in writing for 3 months or 4,000 miles. Some highlights from the program:

1. New points, condenser and rotor are installed.
2. Carburetor(s) adjusted.
3. Sparkplugs replaced.
4. Ignition wiring inspected.
5. Air and gas filters checked.
6. Settings checked electronically.
7. Results road tested.

*Special "minor" tune-up prices apply for the next ten days only. Six cylinder cars $17.88. Eight cylinder cars $19.88. Phone your Imperial Centre for an appointment now.

Eso Car Clinic: $9.95 the works

If you'd like to know exactly what condition your car is in, phone for an appointment at your Eso Car Clinic. Three diagnosticians will use an impressive array of electronic equipment to give you the works for only $9.95. If your car needs attention, get an estimate from the Service Department next door (remember, all Imperial Centre work is guaranteed in writing for 3 months or 4,000 miles). And, of course, you can charge Car Clinic or service work on your Eso-Matic Credit Card.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Trade was light in all commodities on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Oilseeds maintained fractional gains.

Some export buying in flax continued and selling offers came from a large U.S. house.

Repeased activity was moderate. Limited offers, coming from local and commission houses, were absorbed by commercial interests. The market was under no pressure.

Oats and barley traded in moderate volume with domestic shippers buying for eastern feeders. Prices were firm at previous close levels.

Rye was a light local and commission house trade and all futures closed fractionally easier.

Lakeland prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were unchanged.

CHICAGO—Trading in soybeans came on strong toward the close at the board of trade today while wheat and corn were lightly traded.

The surge in soybean activity came as traders speculated that soybean futures will be able to hold a better tone on the possible December loan impoundments.

Chicago's soybean futures were up 1/4 to 1 1/2, corn 1/4 to 1 1/2, and wheat 1/4 to 1 1/2.

Global Retaliation Fear If Nixon Hikes Tariffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Massive world tariff retaliation will follow if the Nixon administration moves toward trade protectionism in the United States, Robert Hendricks, president of Cominco Ltd., said Wednesday.

He told the Vancouver Board of Trade there is a trend toward protectionism in the U.S. and said Canada must discourage it and support world bodies working towards free trade.

He said the greatest threat to exports is that of a "unilateral retreat to protectionism" in the U.S. and it would be a tragedy if tariff benefits won in the last 20 years were wiped out in days.

In the U.S. in 1930, U.S. tariffs were raised to an average of 52 per cent on dutiable goods, the highest in U.S. history. And massive retaliation by other nations followed.

"World trade, which stood at about $56,000,000,000 in 1929, shrank by nearly two-thirds in value by 1932. A decade of stagnation followed. Even in 1938, world trade stood at less than half the 1929 level."

Mr. Hendricks said that with lower tariffs, world trade now exceeds $200,000,000,000 a year, more than eight times the average of the 1930s and the "morass of protectionism and trade blocs."

The mining executive said progress has been made in reducing tariff barriers, but much remained to be done to reduce trade embargoes, quotas, subsidies and special taxes which form non-tariff barriers.

Mr. Hendricks said reduction of trade barriers has helped formation of the "global corporation."

He also supported exports of unprocessed raw materials, saying such trade "sets the economic machine moving and multiplies incomes in supporting industries," creating employment and prosperity.

"Why else, I ask you, are the living standards so much higher in Canada, Australia and New Zealand than in highly industrialized nations?"

And he said Japan, China and other countries on the Pacific Rim will become bigger markets, expanding the Western Canadian economy "at a faster rate than most realize."

Cominco Spending Millions in Valley

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cominco Ltd. announced Wednesday that Valley Copper Mines Ltd., which it operates, will undertake a major underground investigation of a copper deposit in British Columbia.

Robert Hendricks, Cominco president, said that between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 will be spent at Valley Copper's Highland Valley property, near Merritt, about 120 miles northeast of Vancouver.

He said the program will take 12 to 18 months to determine the extent and grade of a low-grade copper deposit which now appears to be "substantial."

Mr. Hendricks said, "no decision can yet be made on production because of the low ore grade. But if the company does produce, it would be in the range of 30,000 to 50,000 tons per day of operation."

He said the company is checking

ing mining and extraction methods and is exploring the possibility of a smelter in the area.

In another area, he said it will be some time before Cominco and Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. decide on surface coal mining in southeastern B.C. but he said negotiations for Japanese sales have started.

The companies are considering working coal deposits in the Elk Valley area, 37 miles from where Kaiser Coal is mining coal for a major contract with Japanese steel interests.

Consumer Spending Surge Predicted

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's foreign trade deficit will more than double in 1968, says the Prudential Insurance Co. of America in its annual Canadian economic forecast.

But an upsurge of business spending—the first since 1966—and a 7 per cent increase in consumer spending, should help Canada's total output of goods and services keep pace with last year's.

The insurance company predicts Canada's gross national product will rise 8.2 per cent this year to $72.6 billion compared with $67.1 billion in 1967. About 3.3 per cent of the increase will be accounted for by higher prices, leaving real growth of almost 5 per cent—exactly as much as in 1967.

The largest factor in the GNP will be consumer spending of an estimated $43.9 billion or $3.1 billion more than in 1967. This is a turn-about from the last three years, when the increase in spending, discounting price increases, declined.

Prudential says consumers now are anxious to "satisfy pent-up wants," and will borrow, if they must, to do so.

They will continue to want cars, especially small ones, and other durable goods, even though higher taxes will mean a cutback in personal savings.

Government spending is expected to rise even more steeply than consumer spending, totaling $14.1 billion or $1.4 billion more than in 1967.

A business capital spending increase of 8 per cent this year is a switch from the recent past. The survey shows business spending declined slightly in 1967 and was stable in 1968, but is expected to reach $11 billion this year.

The Canada-U.S. auto trade pact and more adequate financing are the chief reasons, Prudential says. It speculates that governments should get more revenue from taxes and savings bonds campaigns this year, leaving the capital market freer for business borrowings.

Much of the spending will be on machinery and equipment for an expected expansion of manufacturing.

Collins Radio Ltd.

A contract worth $550,029 for installation of a microwave radio spur connecting Victoria with John Hart generating station, Campbell River, has been awarded to Collins Radio Co. of Canada Ltd.

The net already connects Victoria with Nanaimo and North Cowichan.

A second contract, also to Collins, was awarded by B.C. Hydro for a microwave link between the existing lower mainland net and Kild No. 2 substation, Richmond. It is valued at $226,988.

Canadians Accused

A complaint filed in federal court by the Securities and Exchange Commission charges violations of U.S. securities laws by a Canadian oil company, its president and an employee, and by an affiliated Canadian investment company.

Pascoe Oils Ltd., Quoddy Investment Ltd., Charles D. Robbins, president of both firms, and Charles W. Archibald, a Pascoe geologist, were accused in New York of violating securities laws by selling unregistered stock and making untrue claims.

AT&T-Western Union

An agreement for American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to sell its teletypewriter exchange service TWX to Western Union was approved Wednesday by directors of both companies.

The price was estimated at $80 million. A.T. and T. and Western Union operate competing TWX systems in which subscribers dial connections with other subscribers and use directly connected machines to exchange typewritten messages and data.

Investors Mutual

Asset value per share of Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd. increased by 10.89 per cent in the fiscal year 1968 to $5.67 from $5.12, president C. E. Atchison says in his annual report.

Dividend for the year was 16 cents a share.

Shareholders declined to 82,087 from 96,333, causing a decline in net assets of the mutual fund to $574 million from $594 million.

Mr. Atchison attributed the decline to the fact shareholders may transfer without charge to any other fund managed by the Investors Group.

Grad Students Seek Salaries

Graduate students of B.C. have told education and government officials they should have an income of $3,000 to $4,500 a year while studying.

The recommendations were released Tuesday in a study prepared by the B.C. Committee of Graduate Students, based on a survey conducted in the fall of 1967.

The group, composed of students from the province's three public universities, concluded their fellows have less income to support them than required during the school year.

Fred Dieken, a Uvic chemistry student and head of the Graduate Students Society here, said students in other provinces receive stronger support through bursaries and fellowships.

Graduate students are those studying beyond the level of the bachelor's degree. Study for the master's degree takes from one to two years and the doctorate takes longer.

MINIMUM OF $4,000

The group recommended that married students with more than one dependent should have a minimum income of $4,000 to $4,500 per year.

They also recommended that the basic minimum income for unmarried graduate students be $3,000.

And all stipends for graduates should be continued throughout the term of studies as long as the graduate keeps up his standard of performance.

Fellowships and other funds for graduates are not given with a firm promise of continuance now, the study said.

There are now 188 graduate students at the University of Victoria and about 465 are expected next year.

The report was compiled from questionnaires sent to 2,000 students at Uvic, the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University.

343 REPLIES

Some 342 students replied — 83 per cent from UBC, 13 per cent from SFU and 4 per cent from Uvic.

"About 69 per cent of the married students with one dependent claim to have basic needs in excess of $3,500, which is the current level of support provided by fellowships awarded by the Canada Council or the National Research Council (the latter is actually $3,600)."

Dr. Harry Scargill, dean of graduate studies at Uvic, said Tuesday that he welcomed the study and agreed that graduates require more support than they are receiving.

DETROIT (UPI)—When the youth dashed past Mrs. Edna Jones, 66, and grabbed her purse Wednesday, she kept walking, boarded her bus and went to work.

It was the sixth time in the past two years Mrs. Jones' purse has been snatched.

This time she carried her money elsewhere and the purse held her lunch—a piece of chicken, cookies and a cupcake.

P.C. LAMPOONS PIERRE'S DATING

Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA—Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's dates with young ladies in London aroused sarcastic comment in the Commons this week.

Demanding to know when the government was going to speed up the movement of grain so that four or five vessels waiting for shipments at Vancouver could be loaded.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) attacked the administration.

"If the prime minister at the Commonwealth Conference had been flirting a little more with possible wheat markets rather than skirts the farmers might be better off," he snapped.

Opposition members applauded and some government members shouted "Oh, oh."

The comments came when Agriculture Minister Olson announced a new strain of wheat available in limited quantity in Canada.

The new grain, he cautioned, has relatively poor baking and milling qualities.

B.C. Escapes Decline in Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian labor force and employment, except in B.C., showed larger-than-seasonal declines between November and December while unemployment increased only seasonally by 35,000 to 373,000, a government report showed today.

There were 338,000 unemployed in November and 353,000 in December, 1967.

The joint report by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said the labor force declined by 75,000 to 7,940,000 in the month, and employment by 110,000 to 7,567,000. Compared with December, 1967, the labor force was up by 243,000, employment by 223,000 and unemployment by 20,000.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate was 4.8 per cent, compared with 4.7 a year earlier.

BASED ON SURVEY

The report is based on sample survey of about 35,000 households across Canada.

Farm employment decreased by 56,000 during the month and non-farm employment by 54,000. An increase of 36,000 in employment in transportation, communication and other utilities was more than offset by decreases of 34,000 in construction, 21,000 in public administration and 7,000 in manufacturing.

With the exception of British Columbia, where employment increased slightly, all regions contributed to the decline in employment. Ontario showed a 53,000 drop, Quebec 31,000, the Prairies 23,000 and the Atlantic region 14,000.

Compared with a year ago, farm employment was down by 2,000 and non-farm employment up by 243,000, with the largest gain in community business and personal service which was up by 104,000.

Of the 373,000 unemployed in December, 38 per cent had been unemployed for less than a month, 38 per cent for one to three months and 24 per cent for four months or more.

The survey's estimates do not include students and housewives who have not sought outside work, persons too old or otherwise unable to work and the voluntarily idle or retired.

ANNUAL CANDY RATION

The average American annually crunches about 19 pounds of chocolate bars, licorice, jellybeans and other sugary treats.

VIKING VIEWS

By STEVE HUME

Most of the time you can't keep them apart, but for the University of Victoria women's volleyball team, boys mean a twice-weekly headache.

Because of tight gym schedules, lack of space, and a shortage of coaching staff, the Vikettes must share practices with the senior men. They find it "a bit of a bother."

It's not so much the integrated workouts as the fact the two squads also must share coach Don Smythe, says pretty Anne Jeffery.

"There isn't any friction," she said, "it's just that he has to alternate between teams during workouts. It can get rather disconcerting."

Both volleyball teams travel to Vancouver Saturday for the B.C. championships at Simon Fraser University, and the tournament has added importance for Miss Jeffery.

The 22-year-old physical education student is in her fifth year with the club. This year she graduates from university. As captain of the varsity team, she wants to go out with a top-notch record—that means leaving behind a championship team.

The volleyball Vikings are defending B.C. champs, and Anne would like to see the same success for Vikettes.

But she readily admits there are some big hurdles to be overcome at the Burnaby Mountain tourney.

"We don't really get enough practice time. We average about three-and-a-half hours a week—shared with the men—and we haven't had enough road games," she said.

"The gym schedule is so crowded we can't fit any more time in for workouts, and there just aren't any senior women's volleyball teams on the island."

"We've been playing men's teams just to get tough competition," she said proudly, "and the last time we did that we came fourth out of a six-team tourney playing on men's nets."

"That's the only way we can get the experience necessary for a fighting chance in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association."

Vikettes' roster is deep in experience.

A graduate of North Saanich high school, Miss Jeffery is a veteran of the Canadian Winter Games at Montreal in 1966, as are two other Vikettes hold-overs, Linda Boury and Wendy Aranson.

Two of the squad rookies, Pat Bourne and Cathy Newell, played with B.C. high school championship teams from Victoria High, and were coached, interestingly enough, by Don Smythe.

Miss Jeffery, who will teach physical education after graduation, is the only team member too old for junior classification. The team intends to try for the B.C. senior women's crown.

"The winner, you see, goes to Nova Scotia for the Canadian championships," she said, "and that's what we want."

Supporting the efforts of the experienced three-some will be Bev Melur, a first-string rookie from Revelstoke, Anne Fowler, Val Barnes, Susan Barefoot and Maureen Chan.

Should the Vikettes run into trouble on Burnaby Mountain Saturday, they will still have a card up their sleeve, Miss Jeffery said.

The winner of the WCLAA league tournament, set for UBC Feb. 13-15, also goes to Nova Scotia for the nationals. And the collegiate crown is another one the Uvic club is drawing aim on.

"It's not really an ideal situation right now," Miss Jeffery said, "but we have a top rate coach and 11 girls who can play volleyball."

Saturday night they'll know just how far they have to go to make it all the way to the top.

Barbara Jo Grounded By Last-Minute Threat

MIAMI, Fla.—"I'm going to ride and ride and ride and I'll make it someday," Barbara Jo Rubin said.

But she was disappointed Wednesday.

Male jockeys thwarted her effort to become the first girl rider in American thoroughbred racing history. Now the petite 19-year-old brunette says she's determined to carry on her fight, to take it to court if necessary.

Dressed in the gold and red slacks she had hoped to wear in the fourth race at Tropical Park Wednesday, Barbara Jo told newspaper men:

"I didn't expect this at all. I was all ready to go. The male jockeys were so nice to me this morning."

Fighting back tears, she added:

"I think there were just a few of them who seemed to be against me. But I'm going to try and I hope I'll be the first woman to race some day."

About 100 male jockeys threatened a mass boycott at Tropical if the former exercise girl were allowed to ride a horse named Stoneland in the fourth race.

REFUSED TO RACE

After a stormy meeting in the jockey room, the 11 jockeys in the third race refused to come out unless Barbara Jo was removed from her horse.

Trainer Bryan Webb bowed to the pressure and broke the news to Barbara Jo.

Attorney Robert H. Burns of the American Civil Liberties Union talked with Barbara Jo and her father, a Miami tavern owner, and said he would go to court charging interference with the right of contract.

Burns said he would name each jockey in the third and fourth races and the jockeys Guild as a group if collusion could be proved. He said he also would consider federal action if it could be proved that anti-trust laws had been violated.

Saul Silberman, owner of Tropical Park, said it was useless to argue, after the male jockeys took their action.

"The jockeys felt there were two problems," Silberman said. "Danger to life and danger to their livelihood."

BOWLER OF WEEK

Fine finishing game of 216 brought Pete Sallaway men's tenpin award in Times' Bowler-of-the-Week contest during 12th week of annual competition. Former director of Victoria Tenpin Association and president of Wednesday Commercial League, Pete smashed maples for other games of 197 and 192 for winning series of 605 in Colonist Niteside League at Mayfair Lanes.

Austrian Lass Again Jolts Skiing Rivals

SCHRUNS-SCHAGGUNS, Austria — Austria's 18-year-old Wiltrud Drexel Wednesday jolted the best girl skiers in the world again by practically running away from the field in the Golden Keys downhill race.

She was clocked two minutes 16.76 seconds for a trial measuring 2,300 metres over a drop of 625 metres. Runner-up Florence Steurer of France was timed in 2:18.01. She was followed by two other French girls—Anne Famosse, 2:18.07, and Isabelle Mir, 2:18.36.

Betsy Clifford of Ottawa, a member of Canada's national ski team, finished 10th in 2:18.88.

It was the second downhill victory in a row for Wiltrud. She also won last week's Grindelwald descent, clocking a time that was more than two seconds faster than that of the runner-up.

Alpine ski races usually are decided within one second, and Wiltrud's triumphs bewildered the ski girls.

Racial Unrest Threat in N.W.T.

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A warning that lawlessness and racial unrest may face the Northwest Territories in less than a decade was issued Wednesday to the N.W.T. council.

Duncan Pryde, N.W.T. councillor for the High Arctic, said unless native people are given opportunities to participate in a white dominated society, "all hell will break loose."

Outside council, Mr. Pryde said there is an entire generation of Indian, Eskimo and Metis youth who are educated but unable to find employment.

The trouble will start first among the Indian population, Mr. Pryde said in an interview.

"They were closer to white settlements and already felt they were being left behind."

"They see the white man's clothes and houses. They want to be able to get them too."

But education plus unemployment

MAJOR INVENTION
The invention of the zero was one of the most significant events in the history of mathematics.

ment was leading to frustration among them. And this frustration plus spirit was leading to trouble.

Mr. Pryde said that four youths at Coppermine had been arrested recently for breaking and entering and theft at a Hudson's Bay post.

"This has never happened before there," he said, but it shows what is happening in the north.

"Native people want to participate in northern economic society. So far it has been a white economy, although the Indian and Eskimo population accounts for more than two thirds of the N.W.T.'s 30,000 people."

Mr. Pryde said native people need more than education.

MONTREAL (CP)—The leaders of 10 unions representing city of Montreal employees announced Tuesday that they have called a general walkout for Jan. 29 to protest the city's proposed suspension of contributions to the employees' pension fund.

Stanfield Calls For Probe Into CBC

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP)—Political fallout from the Judy LaMarsh memoirs descended on the Commons Wednesday as Conservatives called for investigation of statements about the CBC made by the former minister.

Led by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, the Conservatives pressed the government to look into statements about "kickbacks" received by CBC employees and about separatist control of Radio-Canada.

Miss LaMarsh's successor as state secretary, Gerard Pelletier, said investigations on the kickbacks will be made "if the accusations are made definitely enough so they can be investigated."

But he added outside the House that he has the impression Miss LaMarsh was just reporting rumors of kickbacks. "Between rumors and precise accusation, there is a vast difference."

Mr. Pelletier also made clear, both inside and outside the House, that he puts little stock in charges of separatist control of Radio-Canada, the French-language division of the publicly-owned CBC.

He told the House that in his opinion the suggestion that one section of the corporation is completely controlled by persons of certain political conviction is completely unfounded and would be difficult to prove.

He also quoted a statement made by Miss LaMarsh, when she reported to Parliament for the CBC, that political convictions of those hired by the corporation were not checked unless subversive or legal questions were involved.

Mr. Pelletier said he had not read the book, called Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage. But he had been assured that if complaints were made they would be investigated.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin suggested Miss LaMarsh might be called before the committee to repeat what she had said in the book.

Mr. Pelletier said committees have the power to initiate investigations.

Mr. Stanfield told reporters later that he strongly resented Mr. Pelletier's attitude. It was unfair to the Canadian people and to the CBC to leave the charges up in the air.

Mr. Pelletier said outside the House he is sure the CBC will investigate if Miss LaMarsh can provide precise information. But he would not order the corporation to do so.

DYING MAN ROBBED BY PHONY INSPECTOR

TORONTO (CP)—A man who posed as a bank inspector Wednesday took $1,800 from a couple while one of his victims, an 81-year-old man, was dying.

Mrs. Thomas Shields, 65, said a man who identified himself as an official from the Royal Bank of Canada telephoned and asked their help to catch a pilfering bank employee.

She said the man asked her to withdraw $1,800 from her account and take it home. But her husband got suspicious and wanted to telephone police. He collapsed while dialing.

At that time a man arrived at the house and while Mrs. Shields was helping her husband the man took the money and left.

Mr. Shields was dead on arrival at hospital, apparently of a heart attack.

GAILY TICKLING Canada's long-faced taxpayers this year will be these television personalities, who gave a preview of the tax department's planned advertising format Wednesday night at Carleton University in Ottawa. (CP Wirephoto.)

Ottawa to Tax Sense of Humor Of Taxpayers

By STEWART MacLEOD
OTTAWA (CP) — YOUR fun-loving national revenue department is going to humor you along with your tax forms again this year.

The seemingly-austere department brought smiles to taxpayers four years ago with its light-hearted "file early" advertisements.

This year the department is lunging into television.

The premiere took place Wednesday night in a university theatre where beautiful girl receptionists and ushers in miniskirts sported bright badges that read: "Taxation." They managed to give the word some appeal.

"It's the lovable old department of revenue," said actor Don Harron on a flood-lit stage before 10-foot blow-ups of the sparkling new tax forms.

As singer Catherine McKinnon sang to the accompaniment of the Brian Browne Trio, the big tax forms swayed solemnly in the background.

SHOW TV FILMS

Then all lights went out and the department showed the four six-minute television films that will come into most Canadian homes before that looming April 30 deadline.

Don Harron is the sole performer of the films, playing an open-line radio personality on the "tax-a-phone show." He plays all the rib-ticking characters who phone in, too. With a generous mixture of humor, characterization and information, they convey a great deal about the details of form-filling.

And the butt of the jokes usually is Ottawa.

"I am going to take up bee-keeping," declares an exasperated farmer. "I've been stung every other way."

"My age?" shouts indignant old lady. "Why should I tell you? Does the prime minister?"

Then the department began taping a quiz show with such well-known television personalities as Laurier Lapierre, Elwy Yost, Gordie Tapp, Don Harron and Miss McKinnon. This show, to be shown later, involves a question-and-answer contest on income taxes.

Brandt Ailing

BONN — Foreign Minister Willy Brandt of West Germany was confined to bed today with an attack of pleurisy and following the advice of his doctors called off a tour of several Asian countries. Brandt had previously cancelled a trip to London, where he was to have had talks with Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart and a meeting with Prime Minister Wilson.

16 Missing Found Alive At Enterprise Muster

HONOLULU (Reuters) — The giant nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise may be ordered back to mainland United States for repairs as the result of an explosion and fires which killed at least 25 crew members Tuesday, unofficial sources said today.

One sailor was still missing but 16 others feared lost were found alive after a muster aboard the ship, now lying in Pearl Harbor dockyard.

Admiral John Hyland, commander of the Pacific Fleet, said naval repair experts were conducting detailed examinations of the damage.

Hyland said the blast that triggered a series of fires aboard the Enterprise—the world's biggest warship—occurred beneath or close to a F-4 Phantom jet fighter parked on the stern of flight deck.

POISED FOR LAUNCHING

A source close to the investigation said it was believed the blast erupted from a bomb or rocket slung under the wings of the Phantom as it was poised for launching on a routine training exercise.

Hyland said the explosions and fires covered the last 50 yards of the 1,123-foot long flight deck.

Twenty-five men died and 85 were injured in the disaster which occurred as the Enterprise, known to U.S. service men as the Big E—was carrying out exercises 75 miles off Hawaii before going to Vietnam waters.

Bogged down with homework?

"Not since we learned to read three times faster," says happy Gerry family

"We were reading fairly quickly before we took the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course," says the Gerry family. "But the heavy homework schedule still left us bogged down with too little time for ourselves. Now we read well over three times faster, and we actually find our course much more interesting." If you are bogged down with homework . . . in school or in business, Reading Dynamics may be the answer.

WHO HAS TAKEN THIS COURSE:

Over 400,000 throughout North America . . . over 400 in the Greater Victoria and Nanaimo area alone. This is the course President Kennedy asked his Joint Chiefs of Staff to take . . . the same course taken by over 10 Canadian Members of Parliament, and by thousands of students, workers, businessmen and housewives from coast to coast.

NO MECHANICAL AIDS—USE IT ANYWHERE!

Reading Dynamics is the world's most-wanted speed reading course because there's absolutely no special equipment needed. We teach you to see and understand words as never before, until your eye simply flies down the page, your hand acting as a pacer! And you are actually reading . . . not skimming!

ACHIEVEMENT WARRANTY

We guarantee to refund the entire tuition to any student who does not at least triple his reading efficiency.

Book Says F.B.I. Knew of Murder Plot

By JOHN HESS
 New York Times
 News Service
 PARIS—A book of mysterious origin accusing the entire American power structure of complicity in the assassination of President John Kennedy

The book, called "Farewell America" in its English-language edition and "L'Amérique Brûle" ("America Burns") in French, says several dozen persons participated directly in the plot and many more, including the FBI, knew about it before the event.

"Farewell America" was printed in Belgium for a company chartered in Liechtenstein, apparently for that purpose. It was marketed in France, with considerable success, by a new company that has no other product, and is now being offered to Americans outside regular trade book channels by a Montreal concern.

The author is listed as James Hepburn. He is described in publicity for the book as an American, but a biography on the cover flap says he was born abroad 34 years ago, went to the London School of Economics, was graduated from the "Institute of Political Studies," in Paris, met Jacqueline Bouvier, who later became Mrs. John F. Kennedy, in 1951, first visited the United States in 1960 and twice met Kennedy that year.

Here are the ingredients of a successful evening — a Buffet prepared to delight the eye as well as the appetite — the exotic atmosphere of the Persian Room — the rhythms of the Century Combo. Featuring "Prime Ride of Beef" Regular Menu Served Also!

has spread through western Europe and is now crossing the Atlantic.

Rene Lamarre, head of Editions Nouvelles Frontières, the French company marketing the book, affirmed in an interview that "James Hepburn" was actually "a pseudonym," representing a "group of European and American researchers."

This is supported by author's acknowledgments in the book, in which 16 collaborators in the French edition and 11 in the English are thanked.

Only first names are given for most of those thanked, who are listed as living in six countries, including the United States.

Lamarre said the manuscript had been offered to and rejected by "practically all" American trade publishers before it appeared in West Germany and France last summer.

An apparent reason for its rejection by U.S. publishers was the fear of libel action. A number of prominent citizens are accused in the book, either directly or by implication, of having had guilty knowledge of the plot to kill the president.

'Boys' Adopt New Look

By RUSSEL FREETHY

While rock groups come and go, The Beach Boys have remained one of the more popular groups in the world, since their advent more than six years ago.

During this time, they have released 20 albums and have toured continually, drawing capacity crowds.

They have returned to Victoria for their second appearance in The Memorial Arena. Their last performance here was sold out and a smashing success. Without doubt it was the best pop concert ever held here.

The Beach Boys are entering a new phase of their career. All the members are writing and the music is new and considerably more creative and complicated, with more thought being given to the lyrical content.

"Do It Again," their latest

Bruce Johnson, Dennis Wilson, Al Jardine, Carl Wilson, Mike Love
... Beach Boys play tonight at Memorial Arena hit, was a step backward taken at the same time The Beatles and The Rolling Stones went back to a solid rock beat with "Lady Madonna" and "Jumpin' Jack Flash."

On stage, the Boys still do their earlier hits. Some, such as "Good Vibrations," have been updated. The group feels more at home on stage, because sessions in a studio lack the spontaneity of a live performance, and the rapport developed with an audience is a fundamental part of their performance.

An eight-piece orchestra has been added to the Beach Boys' touring unit. This includes a piano and a brass section, which will help to recreate the same sound as is heard on their records.

Also, they have brought with them a completely new sound system, one of the finest and probably the most expensive ($150,000) in the world. It should be able to solve the acoustical problems presented by the arena.

Appearing with The Beach Boys tonight, will be the top group from UBC, The Tunnel; a single act, Joe Hicks, a personal friend of the Beach Boys; and Tommy James and The Shondells.

Tommy James has the number one record in the Northwest, with "Crimson and Clover," and was rated as one of the best touring groups in North America by Billboard. They toured with Hubert Humphrey during his campaign for the U.S. Presidency last year.

For Concerts West, the promoters of the show, this concert is a trial run for Victoria. If it is successful, they will be bringing in more top acts.

Beatles' Apple Going Into Red

LONDON — John Lennon said in an interview published today that he and his fellow Beatles will be broke in six months if their organization—Apple—goes on losing money at the present rate.

Lennon's statement immediately brought a denial that the company was in deep financial trouble but an admission that its management is undergoing change.

The interview with Lennon

Korean Choir To Sing Here

The Korean Children's Choir, a group of boys and girls ranging in age from eight to 15, will give a concert in Metropolitan United Church Tuesday, Feb. 4, at 8 p.m.

The children are from foster homes in South Korea which were established after the Korean War by Dr. Bob Pierce, founder and president of World Vision of Canada, an evangelical organization.

Sponsored by World Vision, the choir will tour Canada to raise funds for civilian relief in South Vietnam. A collection will be taken after the Victoria concert.

Quebec Members Against Merger

MONTREAL (CP)—An official of the 12,000-member Letter Carriers' Union of Canada says Quebec members of the union are not in favor of a proposed merger of the LCUC and the 13,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

J. L. A. Matte, an official of Local 10 in Montreal of the Letter Carriers' Union, said in an interview Wednesday only letter carriers in Toronto and Vancouver are in favor of the proposed merger.

was published by a pop music weekly, Disc and Music Echo. It quotes the 23-year-old Beatle as saying:

"We haven't got half the money people think we have. It's been pie-in-the-sky from the start. Apple's losing money every week because it needs close running by a big businessman."

"It doesn't need to make vast profits but if it carries on like this all of us will be broke in the next six months."

The $2,600,000 company was set up with interests covering music publishing, television, shops, movies and electronics.

Its headquarters in London's Savile Row—bought for $1,300,000 a year ago—has a staff of 30 to 40 persons.

"HOUSE NEEDS CLEANING" "Apple needs a new broom and a lot of people there will have to go," Lennon said.

Later Apple issued a statement saying managerial changes were being made.

After a meeting at Apple headquarters Wednesday night, Beatle George Harrison weighed in with what he called a clarification of Lennon's remarks.

"Apple has plenty of money—

we all have," Harrison told re- London's pop music world that porters. "When John said we were losing money he was talking about giving too much away hearsals for a Beatle television to the wrong people. We have spectacular last weekend. given too much to charity. A colleague who did not wish We've just been too generous to be named denied that the two stars came to blows and said it Rumors circulated through was "just a personal tiff."

Murder Rate Shows Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The murder rate and the number of other criminal killings increased in the first six months of Canada's five-year trial of partial abolition of the death penalty, statistics show.

The figures were made public this week by Barry Mather, New Democrat MP for Surrey, one of the early advocates of a trial abolition in this country.

The abolition-retention battle culminated Dec. 29, 1967, in legislation abolishing the death penalty for all killings except those of police and prison guards until Dec. 29, 1972.

Mr. Mather said that at his request, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics furnished data which shows:

- Number of murders rose to 141 in the first six months compared with 122 in the first six months of 1967.
- The murder rate rose to .008 per 1,000 population age seven and older from .007.
- Men murder victims climbed sharply while women victims declined slightly.
- Suspects in the age group 20-29 increased.
- Victims in the age groups 50 or over and under 20 also rose.

Mather said in an interview the figures for so short a period provide no conclusive proof for or against the death penalty.

"My interest is to 'save life,' he said. "If we can do so by retaining it, I think it is important to do so. But if we can't, let's get rid of it."

By provinces, the number of murders and rate in the first six months of the trial, with the 1967 figures bracketed:

Newfoundland 2 and .005 (none); Prince Edward Island none either period; Nova Scotia 6 and .009 (5 and .008); New Brunswick 1 and .002 (2 and .004); Quebec 35 and .007 (29 and .006); Ontario 39 and .006 (40 and .007); Manitoba 16 and .02 (4 and .005); Saskatchewan 8 and .01 (8 and .01); Alberta 6 and .005 (16 and .01); British Columbia 28 and .02 (13 and .008).

Of the 141 murders, 115 persons were charged in 1968. In the comparable 1967 period, 84 persons were charged in the 122 murders.

Where in 1967 the number of incidents of murder totalled 110, multi-killings swelled the total of victims to 122. In 1968, the comparable figures were 129 incidents of murder and with 141 victims.

Transplants Impractical Says Surgeon

HAMILTON (CP) — Heart transplant surgery has no future as a practical solution to heart disease, Dr. Hans Selye, director of the University of Montreal's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery, said Tuesday.

He told a news conference the great number of persons suffering and dying from heart disease makes transplant surgery impractical. In the United States, he said, about 500,000 persons are dying from coronary artery complications every year.

In addition, he said, the general disease which caused a heart disease is not eliminated by transplant surgery, and there was still no evidence that problems of the body's rejection mechanism have been solved.

But, Dr. Selye conceded, heart transplant surgery is highly valuable in learning more about heart function.

Arthur Mayse

Florenda Joy Dick, the bright and lively six-year-old who carries a time-bomb in her chest, knows that a long trip has been planned for her. She is a brave little girl, and accepts the need for repairs to her heart.

Her worry is mostly for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Dick, of 355 Gorge Road.

The other day, she turned from playing with Velvet, the tiny, perk-eared family pup, and went to stand by her father.

"I know you're going to miss me," she said. Then she looked up at the tall man and gravely offered reassurance.

"Daddy, I'll be coming back."

But the sorry fact is that unless help is offered, their daughter may never make that essential journey to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn.

Under arrangements made last year, and not yet cancelled Florenda Joy and her mother are to leave Victoria toward the end of February for Rochester. The child would be admitted to the clinic on March 2.

The following day, she would undergo catheterization, an exploratory procedure that provides the equivalent of a blueprint for the surgeon.

On March 10, as the schedule stands, Mayo's Dr. Dwight McGoon will operate.

Dr. Ronald J. Forth, consultant in heart diseases who came to Victoria after a number of years at Mayo Clinic, defined Florenda Joy's problem to me as a combination of two congenital heart anomalies—a circumstance that places her in a rare category, and vastly increases the risks of repair.

She has a hole between the two ventricles (lower cavities) of her heart. This leads to leakage of blood from the left side of her heart to the right. Blood is diverted from its normal circuit of the body; a constant work-load is imposed on the left side of the heart, and the blood vessels of the lungs are bombarded with a greatly abnormal flow.

The result is cumulative wear and tear on the lung, and progressive obstruction of its blood vessels. In Florenda's case, this "plugging" is not yet so far advanced that blood can't get through.

Let that happen, and the end begins.

The second anomaly is harder for a layman to explain. The large blood vessels and the ventricular chambers of her heart are flakishly transposed.

Florenda Joy, as I write this, will be trotting off to bed with doll and teddybear. Presently dog Velvet, if undetected, will steal up to join the crew.

Tonight, the future rests lightly on this youngest of the children whom David and

Let her peak of condition pass, and she will never again be so fit for the operation which can change that future. And if the March date can't be met, it may be a considerable time before another opening at Mayo Clinic comes up.

I hope she will be spared to grow up, and perhaps one day to marry, and to have children of her own. All these are possible. Only lack of money to bring them about stands in the way. Hospital Insurance and Medicare grants will help defray the cost, but a sizeable sum remains.

So I turn to you, on behalf of a little girl and her family, in the hope that you will help them through a crash rescue attempt.

Times city editor Lloyd Baker and I have opened a bank account in trust for Florenda Joy Dick. We will welcome contributions from any person, organization or school.

At this point, I can't suggest a precise target, but when a figure is worked out, will let you know. The cost will certainly run to several thousand dollars.

In honesty, I must also warn you that the Mayo team faces a very difficult, and perhaps even impossible task. Success cannot be guaranteed.

But Florenda Joy deserves this chance.

'Retain Marijuana Penalties'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson today said he favors retaining stiff penalties for marijuana offenders.

But he would not go along with suggestions that the death penalty be imposed on three-time drug traffickers.

The minister said his concern with marijuana use is that it might lead to the use of "hard drugs."

These drugs, such as heroin, amphetamines and LSD can lead to "more difficult situations"—addictions and physical dependence—he said.

His disagreement with the death penalty follows an earlier statement by Health Minister Ralph Lofmark who said the idea was raised at a meeting of provincial health ministers.

15 TO 20 YEARS

Possibilities mentioned were sentences of 15 to 20 years for second offenders and the death penalty for third offenders.

While some difference of opinion exists "as to the harmful effects of marijuana," Mr. Peterson said he did not know whether arguments favoring milder treatment of first offenders stemmed from a "valid point of view."

Current federal legislation sets penalties for drug offences from a six-month minimum to seven years.

Criticism of the law has come from such people as Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen who, in his inaugural address earlier this month, said "to crucify a young life because of one moment of idle curiosity and experiment seems to me a mockery of social purpose."

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me where I can get a calendar with the changes of the moon on it?—A.C.

A. The major stationery shops in town will be able to supply these.

Q. So that I can hear the other side of the story would you give me the address of an English-language Soviet publication which carries articles on world events.—M.

A. You can get a year's subscription to Soviet Union Today, a monthly pictorial magazine for $1.40 by writing to the USSR Embassy in Canada, 161 Augusta St., Ottawa 2. They will also be able to tell you where Soviet dailies in English are published in North America.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

City Man Dead Two Injured In Collision

A Victoria man was killed and two companions injured Wednesday in a head-on collision on the Alaska Highway, 145 miles north of Fort Nelson, B.C.

William Zelnic, 45, of 654 Baxter St., died in the mishap. Borden Zuck, 48, of 309 Arnold St., and Bruno Boggi, who lives at the Cherry Bank Hotel, are in satisfactory condition in Fort Nelson hospital.

Mr. Zuck's wife, Laura, said the men were travelling together on a business trip in the area.

Mr. Zelnic was employed as chief steward at the Empress Hotel; Mr. Boggi is an assistant chef at the Empress; Mr. Zuck operates the Central Texaco service station at Douglas and Carey.

City to Start Meal Service For Needy

City residents hampered by age or illness may soon get a hot dinner delivered to their door for 50 cents.

The "Meals on Wheels" program could mean doctors would release some patients from hospital sooner, thus freeing badly-needed hospital beds, Ald. Lily Wilson said this morning.

She persuaded council's finance committee to endorse a $500 grant for the project, to buy insulated cabinets which would hold the hot dinners on trays.

"This is not a charity," said Mrs. Wilson. "It's a service for those who need it."

A committee of people from churches, welfare services and the Silver Threads are organizing the project.

It will begin with volunteers manning four cars to deliver the meals. The charge will be a minimum 50 cents, paid on delivery, but customers will be free to pay more if they can afford it.

The service is for those who can't get out to shop or about to prepare their own meals, said Mrs. Wilson. Many older people can and the senior citizens' centre now serves up to 150 meals a day.

Dayliner, Crane Crash

A collision between the E and N Railway Dayliner and a Defence Department mobile crane today delayed departure of the railway passenger carrier.

The collision took place at a level crossing at Munro Head, beyond the Esquimalt graving dock. No one was hurt and damage to both vehicles was said to be light.

Esquimalt police reported at noon no knowledge of the accident. The Dayliner, after returning to the station for inspection, set out again on its trip north.

$281,900 Saving In Debt Charges

By DON VIPOND

An "imaginative" capital financing plan proposed by city treasurer Jim Bramley would save Victoria $281,900 in interest charges.

The plan takes advantage of a dramatic drop in the city's long-term loan repayments in 1975, the year a 30-year refinancing program ends.

That year the annual debt charges plummet from $1,058,244 to $414,265 and Mr. Bramley proposed to council's finance committee this morning that current borrowing for building be tailored for repayment in full at that time.

It means that this year the city would scrap selling the traditional 20-year debentures municipalities use in borrowings and replace them with an issue with a 7½-year term.

MORE MARKETABLE

The idea hits at current high interest rates on this sort of loan and the treasurer believes it would save the city money two ways.

First, the shorter term debentures would be more marketable and therefore sell at a lower interest rate. And second, interest would be paid over a shorter period.

If the $645,000 needed for the fourth year of the city's capital budget program were borrowed on the proposed basis, interest on the loan would total $387,000. On the traditional 20-year debenture basis interest would add up to $668,900.

One of the most exciting stories to come out of the war in the Pacific ended here this week with the death of Lieutenant Commander Ian Ernest Alcock, 54.

It came to light as the Times sought to correct the original death notice which claimed Cdr. Alcock had won a Distinguished Service Cross in the Second World War while serving with the Royal Canadian Navy in the Far East Theatre.

Weather? Anything Can Happen

Freezing temperatures were forecast for Victoria again tonight but daytime melting is expected to once more rid the streets of snow.

A few showers of snow may occur but weather officials say they should be less frequent.

"A little improvement seems to be shaping" said a weather official. Then he cautioned that cold air is still hanging over the province and while it persists "anything can happen."

Melting conditions were expected to be general today with south-west winds and temperatures nudging 36 at the airport. In Victoria tonight they will drop to 32 near the waterfront and in the other areas, the mid-twenties.

Meantime, up-Island and elsewhere in B.C., snow continues to pile up.

Port Alberni has 36 inches on the ground. Tofino, where snow seldom appears, received a new five inches and now has 16 inches in the town. Nanaimo has 11 inches, Comox one inch and at Vancouver an additional two inches brought the depth to five inches at the airport.

Local municipalities sent out sanding crews overnight and roads were slidy. Ice was still evident on the Malahat despite plowing. Several cars were reported ditched Wednesday.

Elderly Woman Found In Gorge

Esquimalt police today recovered the body of an elderly woman floating face down in the Gorge just below the Tillamook Bridge.

The body was first noted near the shoreline just after 12:30 p.m. and recovered a half-hour later.

No details on who the woman was or how long she had been in the water were available at press time.

Legislation Planned For B.C. Skyscraper

The government will introduce legislation at the coming session to enable construction of its planned skyscraper in downtown Vancouver, Public Works Minister W. N. Chant indicated today.

He said drilling surveys have proved that the whole block site, next to the Vancouver courthouse, is strong enough "to support a building of the weight we plan."

He refused to tell reporters how big the structure will be but previous reports said it would rise 55 stories and Premier Bennett claimed it would be the tallest building in Canada.

There has been no estimate of

$78,000 Costs At Mt. Finlayson

A man who pleaded guilty today to firing trace bullets which are blamed for starting a $78,000 fire on Mount Finlayson, was fined $100.

Brian A. Watson, working as a surveyor's assistant in Dawson Creek and believed to be in his early twenties, was charged with starting a fire August 4 last year which raged over 130 acres of bush land in the Malahat area.

He did not appear in court and was represented by Sean Howard.

Prosecutor George MacMinn said an investigation of the fire showed the accused had been firing tracer bullets from west to east in the area.

He said the fire took a week to extinguish and many men were employed in putting it out.

In answering a question from Magistrate J. A. Evers he said it was not the fire two Victoria pilots were fighting when their water bomber clipped a tree and crashed near Shawanigan Lake Aug. 8. They were both killed.

Mr. Howard said Watson had inherited a .303 rifle from his grandfather and was firing tracer bullets in the evening. He said the accused was not aware a fire had started at that time.

He said Watson was on his father's property and firing across the inlet.

"It's an accepted practice in that area to fire rifles," he said, "but he should have known more about tracer bullets."

"It was a foolish, stupid thing to do but there was no intent to start a fire."

At the time of the fire officials said they suspected a careless smoker was responsible.

Another fire in the same area in the summer of 1967 claimed the life of another two pilots when their bomber crashed on Skirt Mountain near Goldstream.

The magistrate quipped "It's not very much if you say it quickly" when told of the fire fighting costs.

Before imposing the fine he said in reference to the firing of bullets "it's a highly dangerous practice."

Court Told Of 'Long Day' Celebrations

Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford used to celebrate June 21 as the anniversary of picnics he said he had in England with Sir Winston Churchill and the viceroy of India, it was stated in British Columbia Supreme Court today.

Witnesses said Mr. Ford told them the picnics were always held on the longest day of the year (June 21). They were among his happiest memories and he liked to celebrate them by going into the country every June 21.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. McKay, formerly of Victoria, told how Mr. Ford invited them to a private dinner at East Sooke in memory of "the picnics."

It was held in an East Sooke restaurant on June 21, 1955.

PRETENSE

"Mr. Ford pretended he was Churchill while I was supposed to be the viceroy of India," said Mr. McKay, a director of the Exchange Building in Victoria, now resident in Vancouver.

Mrs. McKay, who followed her husband onto the witness stand, said she couldn't remember what role she was asked to play at the dinner. She recalled that Mr. Ford was dressed in "old-fashioned country clothes."

Mr. and Mrs. McKay both testified that Mr. Ford told highly dramatic stories and enjoyed having an audience. He impressed them as "a lonely man" living alone in a big house at 1012 Terrace Avenue (near Oak Bay Junction). He often spoke of his son John, in Melbourne, Australia, as "my son."

Mr. and Mrs. McKay gave evidence at the sixth day of a trial to determine the validity of a will made by Mr. Ford in 1958. (He died Oct. 26, 1967).

John Douglas Ford of Melbourne is contesting the will on the ground that his father was of unsound mind and suffering from delusions, including a delusion that he was not his son.

Under the 1958 will, Mr. Ford Jr. receives $50,000 while most of the remainder of the estate goes to Victoria charities.

He asks that an earlier will, made in 1933, be declared valid. Under this will, Mr. Ford would get the entire estate with the exception of bequests to charity totalling $350,000.

Death Recalls Wartime Jungle Struggle

By PETE LOUDON

Old sailors know the Canadian navy didn't figure in the Pacific war. It was found that Commander Alcock, then a lieutenant, won his "gong" while on loan to the Royal Navy.

EXPLOITS DESCRIBED

This is the way his exploits were described in The Far Distant Ships, by naval historian Joseph Schull:

"Of the hundreds (of Canadians) who served with the Royal Navy on combined operations, perhaps the one with the most unusual story to tell was a red-haired, scrawny, fever-ridden spectre who staggered out of a Malayan jungle on August 23, 1945."

The story tells how he and several teammates had been brought in by submarine and sent in small canoes to reconnoitre beaches where

later allied landings were planned.

Lieut. Alcock's was one of four canoes and his paddler was a British sailor named Turner. They prowled under the noses of unseeing Japanese sentries but their observation took too long. They could not get back to the sub before daylight.

They decided to beach the canoe and hide it and seek out Malaysian underground forces in the jungle. Their trek took 48 hours and once they passed so close to a Japanese post they could see enemy soldiers asleep. They themselves had no sleep and only a minimum of food.

They found two more of their party already at the camp of the Malays and Chinese. The four were received with great suspicion.

They were passed from post to post through miles of jungle for two weeks before meeting a senior Chinese officer. Alcock was permitted to write a signal telling of his position and he was assured it would be sent to the British forces.

The Chinese officer, who controlled a force of 10,000 guerrillas, asked him also to arrange for an air drop of arms and ammunition. He was certain they would enable him to clear the Japanese out of Malaya.

The signal went out and later some of the arms arrived.

But in the interim Japanese patrols forced Lieut. Alcock and his party to move on.

There were weeks of marching and hiding, fever and jungle sores. Men fell by the wayside where rescue parties later saved them. But Lieutenant Alcock kept going, though feverish and distrustful of his guides.

MISERY, FEAR

One day, toward the end of July he was given a message from a British detachment already established in Malaya telling him to make for Megri Sembilan on the west coast.

Three more weeks of misery and fear dodging Japanese patrols and then he saw a British ship.

Delirious almost, he learned the great news, the last of the enemy were being mopped up. And the war had been officially over for more than a week.

FATHER ALSO EXPERIENCED CLOSE CALL WITH DISASTER

Sea stories seem to run in the Alcock family.

The father of Lieut. Commander Ian Alcock was Capt. Ernest Alcock and in the final phases of the First World War he also had a brush with death in the Pacific.

Capt. Alcock, who died here in 1954, was chief officer aboard HMCS Galiano, a Royal Canadian Navy patrol vessel which was lost near the Queen Charlottes in 1918.

Capt. Alcock was taken to hospital with "flu the night before Galiano sailed. A rip in her plates caused her to sink and all 47 persons aboard were drowned.

Penny Fancies Carved Figurines

By PENNY SAVER

"If you want one of those, now is the time to buy," the proprietor told me as I paused to gaze longingly at his display of carved wooden figurines. I've had my eye on these carvings for quite a while now, but I didn't realize my passion was so well known. Perhaps the days of Big Brother are already here!

The proprietor advised me to buy because he has a half-price special on these items as long as his stock lasts. The figurines in question show a woman's head gracefully turned with the hair swirling out from the face. Monkey-pod wood is used with its close, almost invisible grain and subtle shadings of color. The finish is oiled. These figurines, which come from the Philippines, come in several sizes. The largest, which regularly sell for $29.95 are now $14.95. Medium size heads which were $23.95 a few weeks ago are now $11.95 while the ones which are regularly $13.95 are now $6.95. If you too have been gazing at these graceful carvings, hurry right down for, as with all bargains of this kind, the stock is limited and the early shopper saves the pennies.

We started to chat and the proprietor told me of a sad state of affairs that must have afflicted a number of shops during the holiday season. He ordered wooden salad sets last summer but Christmas passed without his order arriving on the doorstep. The salad sets, which are lovely indeed, arrived just recently and are now on sale, but other items ordered around the same time are, presumably, still in transit. How annoying, both for the shopkeepers and for customers who put in orders ahead of time, only to discover at the last moment that they had no gift to put under the tree!

The salad sets themselves are $14.95 each and come in two different woods. Each set contains seven pieces: A "mother bowl" that is 10 inches in diameter, four five-inch individual bowls and salad servers in the same wood. There are two woods to choose from. One is a cherry with an oiled finish that displays the rosy hue of the wood to perfection. This is a close-grained wood and the designer has chosen to make his bowls with which smooth curves that beg to be touched. In direct comparison is the other wood used for these bowl sets. Identified as zelkova wood, this resembles a teak. It has thin "strips" of grain in a dark shade separated by bands of an almost golden hue. This pattern the bowls with curves and circles. In displaying this bolder grain the craftsman has chosen a bolder design. The sides of the bowl are angled rather than smooth and the results are very effective. Again the finish has been oiled.

A broken strap doesn't mean a slip has had it, nor does an over-stretched garter mean that a sound corset or girdle must be scrapped. Replacements for these small, breakable items can be bought for only a few cents each. Hose supports with varying lengths and widths of elastic can be purchased at 29 cents for a package of two. Shoulder straps are 29 cents a package. Replacement hooks for the back of a brassiere are inexpensive and from the variety of styles I spotted there must be replacements for almost every make. Most are 25 cents for double hooks on wide elastic but one I saw, with a cotton and elastic was 20 cents.

If you would like to know where to shop for these items, please call 382-3131.

TODAY'S RECIPE

PARFAIT CAKE

One pkg. devil's food cake mix; 2 tablespoons sugar; 3 t. tablespoons cornstarch; 4 cans (8½ oz. each) pineapple tidbits; 2 cans (16 oz. each) apricot halves; whipped cream.

Prepare and bake cake according to package directions using two nine-inch layer pans.

Mix sugar and cornstarch together in a saucepan; add 2 cups syrup drained from fruits. Stir until smooth.

Cook until thickened, stirring. Add drained pineapple and apricot halves, cut into half; heat.

Place one cake layer on serving plate; spread with pineapple-apricot filling. Top with second layer and rest of filling mixture. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

DEAR ABBY...

Have Confidence In Your Doctor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I started seeing a lady psychiatrist about my problems (I am a man). I have always had a "thing" about doctors, and if I am going to talk about my innermost thoughts, I would feel much more relaxed calling her "Emily."

I asked her last week if I could call her "Emily," and she said no, she wanted me to call her "Doctor." Why?

My cousin is also a psychiatrist, and he said if a patient wanted to call him "Sandor" (his name), he wouldn't object, because the most important thing is to make the patient feel comfortable. I think he is right and I would like your opinion.

ON THE COUCH

DEAR ABBY: You are not on your cousin's couch, so don't ask him for professional help. The reason you want to call your doctor "Emily" is obviously because you would like to be on a more personal basis with her. She prefers to keep the relationship strictly professional, for which I don't blame her.

The "most important thing" is for you to have confidence in your own therapist, and abide by her wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy about a month ago and we hit it off right from the start. He's good looking, very successful in his business, and he is great company. I flipped for him. So what's my problem?

He smells like my ex-husband, and this turns me off. I haven't got the nerve to tell him to use some other kind of cologne or after-shave, but so help me, Abby, when he gets close to me, the smell of him brings back so many memories, both happy and painful, that I am turned off!

Am I crazy? And how can this problem be solved?

TURNED OFF

DEAR ABBY: You are not crazy, and your problem can be easily solved. Buy the gentleman another brand of cologne and after-shave and ask him to wear it just for you. If he's as great as you say he is, you won't mind paying through the nose.

DEAR ABBY: May I suggest how "HURT AGAIN" may help her forgetful husband to "remember" her birthday, anniversary, and other occasions?

Put little notes around where he will be sure to see them. "Only 10 more shopping days until my birthday," or "only five more shopping days until our anniversary."

I also have a wonderful husband who has a lot on his mind and "forgets" occasions about which I am sentimental, but I have used this little trick—and it works.

NEVER HURT

DEAR ABBY: I have just two words to say to these switchboard operators who complain about the wives calling their husbands at work to talk about nothing: "SHUT UP!" It is none of their business. Besides, what are they doing listening in on personal calls, anyway?

MRS. M. F. McC.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SINGLE IN SAN ANTONIO. I said (and I repeat) that children should be disciplined by their parents when they are guests in another's home. But if the parents sit by and say nothing when the child walks on the sofa, THEN the host should tell the child that floors are for walking on and sofas are for sitting on. And if that does not make an impression, I would demonstrate that bottoms are for paddling when the children don't behave.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 63700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Improvement of Education Level Results in More Working Wives

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — The general improvement in the average level of education in Canada is likely to induce more and more women to remain in the labor force after marriage, a new study indicates.

The study by John D. Allingham, of the Australian National University and the University of Western Ontario at London, and Byron G. Spencer of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ont., was initiated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

It is an evaluation of the influence of age, education of both wife and husband, children and place of residence on the participation of married women in Canada's work force.

This evaluation prompts the researchers to suggest three future tendencies in such participation.

Improved education alone, they say, would suggest a continuing increase in the participation rate of married women in most professional and industrial groups.

"Even for women in the most fertile age group—25 to 34, an increased availability of day nurseries and other substitutes for mother's constant attention would permit increased participation rates," the authors say.

Secondly, any change in fertility patterns brought about, for example, by the wider use of highly effective means of birth control, could be expected to have a pronounced impact on the number of married women working.

"If couples decide to wait a few years after marriage before having children, the wife is very likely to be in the labor force during that period. And there is evidence that such family planning has become a widespread phenomenon."

Japanese Couturiere Makes Travel Robes Exciting By Creating Distinctive Prints in Terry Cloth

Terry travel robes become high fashion when the fabric, thick and luxuriously soft, is handled by Japan's top couturiere, Mme. Hanae Mori. The print is a blow-up of Japanese writing which actually reads "I love you". Kimono wrap ties at the side with black ribbon. This and other Mori designs of Martex towelling by Royal Robes.

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Robes for travel are usually uninspired affairs with the accent on packability, but little in the way of fashion inspiration. But Mme. Hanae Mori, the diminutive Japanese couturiere who is known to fashionables here for her superb evening gowns, has some new ideas for the robe that goes to resorts.

Mme. Mori believes in practicality for the travel robe, thinks terry the best fabric to use. But she sees no reason for it to be dull. A designer of her own fabrics, she creates terry in Japanese prints.

One, in black on white, is a blow-up of Japanese writing. Another is done in huge butterflies of unearthly colors on a gold background. Pink and white chrysanthemums are scattered on a field of blue, or are enlarged into giant petals of white and pink on red. The fifth is an abstract derived from the look of waves as they curl to crash upon a beach. It is in blue, black and pink with white.

The terry designs were turned into kimono-style robes by Mme. Mori for Royal Robes. Actually, the fabrics were first towels, huge 44-inch squares for Martex, and it was these she made into robes. The black and white print of Japanese writing is tied to one side, while the butterfly pattern has a luxuriously heavy rope sash. The wave print comes as a sleeveless culotte, while the vivid petal print appears in a duster bound in red, with slanted pockets.

VELOUR SURFACE

The terry in which these designs are done is luxuriously thick and plushy, with a velour surface. Royal Robes has it also in Emili Pucci prints co-ordinated with towels and bath sheets from Spring Mills. There is a long robe in a print combining orange, brown, yellow and white. In a short robe the print combines pale and bright colors such as lavender and pink with yellow and orange.

The Mori and Pucci designs bring a new life to terry and to travel robes, putting them at last in the high-fashion bracket.

Clubwomen's News

Dinner, Caterers—Convener Mrs. A. W. Smith outlined plans for the dinner which the Esquimalt Chapter IODE will convene for the Municipal Chapter's annual meeting in March when the group met recently. Chapter representative Mrs. R. Ross said that the Esquimalt Chapter had been assigned the home cooking stall at the IODE Festival, to be held in May. Members voted $30 to be spent this month on patients of the Victorian Order of Nurses. Mrs. T. G. Clarke donated an afghan which will be sent to the West Bay Hospital. Regent Mrs. W. R. Jeffs thanked members for the squares they'd knitted for afghans, and Mrs. M. H. Saar for the sewing she had done throughout the year. The annual meeting of the group will be held February 10 at the Strathcona Hotel.

Mini Fades In Britain

LONDON (AP) — Knees are still in sight, but just barely, as London's spring and summer high fashion collections continued with Norman Hartnell's show Wednesday.

Both Hardy Amies Tuesday and now Hartnell showed no more than a bit of leg above the knee.

A slightly flared A-line emerged as the new silhouette in the first two days of the season, with some box or knife pleated skirts. Amies pushed the waistline down, while Hartnell pulls it up. They agree on longer jackets.

WHY GROW OLD?

BY JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Beauty Improvement Plan Will Help You Prepare for Spring Fashions

Start on Self-Improvement Decide to Lose Overweight

Happily, self-improvement snowballs, and the best way to start the ball rolling is for a woman to lose any overweight she may have. We are so likely to live up or down to the picture we have of ourselves and overweight makes many women self-conscious.

Lowman

It is not much fun buying clothes when you cannot wear those you really like. There is enough time between now and your spring shopping to take care of that situation. It is much more satisfactory to alter the figure than to alter the clothes. It is less expensive, too!

PLEASANT RESULTS

When a woman's figure is in shape her interest in clothes perks up immediately. She is also much more apt to take an interest in hair styling, makeup and meticulous grooming. Somehow when overweight she was discouraged and it all seemed hopeless to her.

This is the last day of my Eight-Week Beauty Improvement Plan series, except for one day a week for the next six weeks when I join you again. I will do this to prod you with additional information and ideas and encourage you along the way.

Those of you who have been following BIP have now weighed and measured yourselves and know which measurements are out of line and how much you should lose. You have become acquainted with calories and some of the secrets of successful reducing. You have been urged to exercise and have been given instructions concerning it. You are off to a flying start, and eight weeks will zip past before you know it!

WATCH COMPLEXION

I hope you will take special care of your complexion as part of your eight weeks of self-improvement. Nothing adds more to a woman's beauty than lovely skin. If you have been neglecting yours or have not given it as much care as it deserves make up for it during the next few weeks.

Skin care is especially important when a woman is losing weight. There are fewer fats in the diet and the epidermis must shrink to fit the smaller silhouette. Use body lotions generously and lubricate the skin of the face

Double Purpose

Use cotton swabs for dabbing on your favorite perfume but — stop — don't toss them away! Tuck them in with your gloves or lingerie and enjoy the scent for weeks.

This exercise will improve the contour of your legs and ankles. Sit on the edge of a chair. Place your arms on the arms of the chair. Lean back against the back of the chair and straighten your legs out in front of you. Legs are straight throughout the exercise. Try to touch the soles of your feet to the floor. Press down hard. Then lift the toes and pull them back toward your body as far as possible (heels still on the floor). Continue, slowly.

and neck regularly. Also, use a moisturizer under your usual makeup.

If your skin is extremely dry, use cleansing creams and also give lubricating cream time to soak in. If possible leave on all night. If not, do so for an hour or more during the day. However, all complexions profit by soap once in a while, at least once a week, maybe twice a week.

If you have an oily complexion, you should treat it differently. Use soap and water generously, several times a day. Follow rinsing with an astringent. Do not use any cream on your face. Your reducing diet will be beneficial to your skin because fats and greasy foods are curtailed.

BREAKFAST

Eight ounces orange juice, 1/2 cup oatmeal, artificial sweetener, 6 oz. glass skim milk, use part on cereal, 1 poached egg on 1 slice whole wheat toast with onion salt or grated parmesan cheese.

Total calories for the day —1,220.

LUNCH

One cup canned tomato soup, garnished with chopped chives. Oyster cocktail: combine 6 poached oysters with 1/2 cucumber, peeled and chopped, and 2 tbs. chili sauce; serve chilled and garnished with a lemon wedge; two pieces of melba toast (plain).

DINNER

Four ounces roast turkey served with 1 oz. canned, dietetic cranberries, 1 medium pan roasted potato, 1 roasted carrot, 1 whole roasted onion. Dessert: 1/2 cup sprinkled with nutmeg.

BEDTIME SNACK

Eight-ounce glass skim milk flavored with 1 tsp. maple syrup.

Bumpy Exit

Margaret Wilson, 76, was fined $45 and banned from driving for six months in Ayr, Scotland, after hitting six cars when trying to get out of a parking space.

If you missed the first part of my Eight-Week Beauty Improvement Plan or would like to have the complete course in booklet form send 25 cents plus 15 cents for postage and handling and your printed name and address with your request for the "Bip Kit." This also includes the unique chart on which you can plot your progress and watch your beauty line rise as your weight line drops. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Kills kitchen fires

Never throw water on burning fat or grease. Just douse with Cow Brand Baking Soda to smother flames and prevent spattering. Keep a package near the stove for emergency.

Pianists to Dominate Recital Of Conservatory Award Winners

Scholarships, bursaries and silver medals will be presented to a number of students at the annual presentation recital organized by the Royal Conservatory of Music (Toronto) Alumni, Victoria Branch, Saturday at 8 p.m.

The recital will take place in the Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum.

Presentations will be made by Phyllis Schults, a well-known piano teacher on the music faculty of the University of British Columbia, an experienced adjudicator and examiner.

Piano students will dominate the program but variety will be added by the appearance of one speech art medalist, two singers and two clarinet players.

Also special arrangements have been made for an organ to be moved to the hall for the occasion so that medalist Mary Chard may perform.

There will be an honor performance by violinist Nancy Meredith and pianist Linn Hendry will be the guest artist.

Others taking part are Benjamin Wood, Anabelle Burrows, Susan Patterson, William Patterson, Stephen Calder, Wendy Stofor, Ainslie MacQuarrie and Susan de Burgh, pianists; Penelope Beavan and Robin Powell, vocalists; Nona Avren, speech art, and Stafford Horne and Laura Horton, clarinet.

Parents Negligent Death Jury Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parents of a youth whose body was found in a field in suburban Richmond Jan. 1 were held partially negligent in his death Wednesday by a coroner's jury.

Evidence was that the parents of Gordon Howard Rodie, 14, knew their son had gone to a New Year's Eve party, but did not know exactly where.

Dr. Terrance Rutherford, pathologist at St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver, said death was due to acute alcoholic toxicity, exposure and asphyxia.

Young Rodie was found without his shoes, jacket or hat in a field outside a barn near his home. The party had been held in the barn.

The jury suggested parents should insist on knowing the whereabouts of their children and exercise greater control on their movements.

The jury ruled death was due to misadventure.

John Rodie, father of the dead boy, said he did not know his son drank.

LIFE EXISTS

Though Great Salt Lake is often called dead, several forms of larvae and algae and tiny shrimp survive in its briny waters.

Damp Grain Glut Hits Shipments

By DON MacLACHLAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Manitoba's agriculture minister said Wednesday there are indications some foreign buyers are "looking elsewhere" because of the current tieup in shipping grain from the West Coast.

J. Douglas Watt, here with his deputy for an investigation ordered by Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba, said in an interview he couldn't document the indications and didn't want to say more at this time.

"But the question is have we jeopardized our position?" he said while investigating why 20 ships were waiting for dry grain that's on the Prairies—while elevators here are clogged with damp or tough grain.

Mr. Watt said there's a yet-unresolved "conflict of opinion" as to who is responsible. But the "definite problem" must be brought home to all authorities responsible for Prairie grain shipments.

W. C. McNamara, chief commissioner of the Canadian wheat board—one of the authorities—said in Winnipeg that part of the problem is above-normal demand for Canadian wheat in other countries.

But the chief problem is that priority was given to shipping the high volume of damp grain from last year's prairie harvest, he said. The idea was to make full use of terminal dryers here.

"The result," said Mr. McNamara, "was that an excess of this high moisture grain was put into the marketing channels."

TACKLES THE PROBLEM

The grain industry is trying to resolve the problem through a new co-ordinating committee here, but Mr. McNamara said problems can be expected to continue for "the next few weeks."

For a start, the co-ordinating committee will give priority to quick unloading of grain cars from the Prairies. Shipments of damp grain have been heavily restricted as a temporary measure.

W. H. Rowland, assistant manager of the wheat board office here, said Canada won't permit wet grain to go to export markets because it produces degraded flour and would harm Canada's reputation.

Meanwhile, a few hundred yards from the hotel where Mr. Watt is staying, ships ride empty and high in the waters of Burrard Inlet. Some have been there for more than a month.

Demurrage charges run as high as $2,500 a day each and farmers face much, if not all, of the bill for delay. Premier Weir said in Winnipeg it could run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

One vessel, the Sandefjord, has waited since Dec. 4 for dry grain, adding to another problem: General-cargo freighters are finding it difficult to get berths, delaying movement of other commodities.

Dryers at the eight elevators in the Vancouver area are working around the clock. But their maximum capacity is about 125,000 bushels a day while vessels like the Sandefjord can hold up to 1,000,000 bushels.

Vancouver elevators hold about 13,500,000 bushels of all grains with about 5,000,000 now classified as damp.

Red China Still Tops Wheat Buyers

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada sold 302,000,000 bushels of wheat to 50 countries at an average price of $2.02 a bushel during the first 10 months of 1968. Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin informed the Commons Wednesday.

The information was in a return for Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Abitibi). The figures do not include a 50,000,000-bushel sale to China announced in December.

In the 10-month figures, China was the biggest buyer with 70,000,000 bushels. Britain was next with 46,977,000 bushels followed by Japan (41,986,000) and the U.S.S.R. (39,523,000).

The smallest sale was to Barbados—294 bushels.

Sales in some other years, with average price per bushel: 1941—196,646,340 bushels at 82 cents; 1951—237,060,505 bushels at $1.86; 1961—366,961,460 bushels at $1.80; 1967—350,353,905 bushels at $2.11.

OTTAWA (CP)—A wide assortment of consumer products that could be dangerous, from children's nighties to lawn mowers, will be examined under legislation coming before Parliament soon.

The hazardous products bill, a broadened version of a bill that died with the end of the last Parliament, will be introduced in the Senate soon after it resumes Tuesday.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford says it will have broader scope for regulating or banning products found to be dangerous.

The same products named in last year's bill for banning or regulation will be in the new measure, he says.

But wider powers will be included, permitting the government to add new items as a threat is spotted.

In practice that could mean regulations requiring a glue purchaser to sign a register. It could mean imposing standards on inflammability of clothing. Or it could mean a ban on a type of Christmas tree lights found to be hazardous.

EXPECTS CO-OPERATION

Mr. Basford makes clear that his department is in no mood to hound reputable manufacturers through the legislation. He reasons that most manufacturers will be more than willing to remove or alter a product found to be dangerous.

In practice, says Mr. Basford, the act will work this way:

When a substance is found on the market that is clearly a health hazard, an order-in-council will be passed banning it.

In the case of products where the hazard is less clear, the department would meet with the manufacturer and ask for suggestions on how to remove the threat.

"I would think that in practice they would remove it themselves," Mr. Basford says.

"With something that is a menace or danger to health, the reasons for dropping it quietly are pretty obvious."

The industry also should have the right to make representations against actions of the department, he says.

SCOPE FOR APPEAL

Some avenue for businessmen to appeal the regulations also is expected to be written into the act.

The new program will be enforced by inspectors brought into the consumer affairs department last year as it took over retail inspection functions from other departments.

But the precise methods for handling several specific problems have not yet been worked out.

In the case of glue-sniffing, for example, a department official has been in Washington recently studying American practice.

Information from this trip shows that regulation, such as a requirement for a warning label saying the glue can cause injury or death, is helpful, Mr. Basford says.

WILL SEEK ADDITIVE

"One of the things we want to explore with the industry is the possibility of putting additives into the glue to make it 'un-sniffable,'" he says. "I'm told that at the moment this is not practicable."

And in any case the department recognizes that "this is a social and psychological problem, and all the regulations in the world are not going to stop people from sniffing glue."

In the case of fabrics, the department is working with the government specifications branch to set tests of inflammability.

Food, drugs and cosmetics will continue to be controlled by the Food and Drugs Act. Explosives, including firecrackers, come under the Explosive Act and pesticides under the Pest Control Products Act.

Items that will be specifically banned by the new act include jacquard beans, sometimes used in costume jewelry, children's toys or furniture with a high level of lead oxide in their paint and other household paints with a flashpoint of less than 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Products that may be regulated in advertising or selling include some bleaches, cleansers and polishes as well as certain glues.

STUDENT NOW TOP BANANA

TORONTO (CP)—Rick Boles of Montreal, a photographic arts student at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, claims to be the world's new banana-eating champion. He ate 52 bananas Wednesday in a contest during the institute's winter carnival to top 15 other contestants. It took him 2½ hours. The Guinness Book of World Records say the banana-eating record was set in 1964 by a London man who ate 40 in 40 minutes.

Burrard Tender Low

Lowest of two tenders for lengthening the B.C. Ferry Queen of Esquimalt was submitted Wednesday by Burrard Drydock of Vancouver.

Bid of $1,926,499 for adding an 84-foot mid-section to the vessel was $117,213 less than the $2,043,712 bid submitted by Yarrows Ltd. of Victoria.

Included in the tenders for lengthening the vessel were tenders to modify the ship's after lounge and sanitary system.

Burrard Drydock's bid of $272,226 for these alterations will carry 193 cars and was $8,000 lower than Yarrows'. 1,200 passengers compared with When work is completed in its present capacity of 138 cars mid-June, the Queen of Esquimalt and 1,000 passengers.

'Word for '69 Is Involvement'

DUNCAN — The Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce must become more involved in local affairs because it is the only representative of businessmen in this city that has an effective voice, newly-elected President Jim Lambeth told the annual general meeting on Wednesday.

Mr. Lambeth, manager of the Bank of Montreal branch, said, "The word for 1969 is involvement."

8-YEAR TERM FOR FORGERY

NANAIMO (CP) — Harry Glen McKenzie, 29, of Nanaimo, Monday was sentenced to eight years for passing forged cheques totalling $142. McKenzie also was given a concurrent sentence of two years for theft of identification used in passing the cheques.

Transferred To Gold River

LAKE COWICHAN — Len Garrison, accountant at the Toronto-Dominion Bank branch here for the last three years, will become manager of the Gold River branch starting Jan. 20. His replacement is Ed Cooper of Port Alberni. Mr. Garrison has been active in local Boy Scouts' Association and Kinsmen, and was chairman of the local Red Cross campaign for the last two years.

Les Atchison, a chartered accountant, was named vice-president. Directors are: Earl Kidder, Gary Hawe, Dick McEwen, Sam Keeble, Bob Lewis, Bernie Johnson, Eric Rogue and Al Van Sacker.

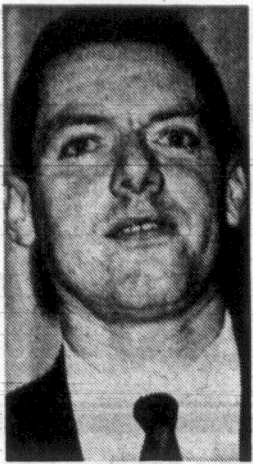

Mayor Jim Quaife urged that an economic development committee representing Lake Cowichan, Duncan, North Cowichan, Chemainus and Crofton be revitalized. The suggestion was tabled for more discussion.

SNOW CLEARANCE
A letter of appreciation was to be sent to the city and North Cowichan for an excellent job of snow clearance and sanding. Installation of officers will take place at a banquet on Jan. 30.

Mayor Quaife suggested that a beard-growing contest would add color to the city's annual bonanza days but no one took up the offer.

A resolution was passed to hold a forum to supply information about the work of various governmental bodies; such as the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, to the notice of the general public.

Representatives of the regional board, city, North Cowichan municipality and a representative of the municipal affairs department would be asked to attend.

DEMANDS EXPLANATION ON PAYMENT OF FEES

DUNCAN — Hospital administrator Ken Noton will be asked to attend the next meeting of Cowichan Valley Regional Board to explain payment of a $9,000 bill for architects' fees for a proposed extended care unit adjacent to Cowichan District Hospital.

The request came from board director David Laverock, who said the board had "not even seen the plans" for the addition.

Board secretary Peter Haywood explained it was the usual practice for British Columbia Hospital Insurance to pay 60 per cent of the cost if the plans had been approved by them.

The plans had not been approved because of a disagreement between the BCHIS and the hospital board on type of construction.

"We should have clarification on this before we pay this $9,000 fee," Mr. Laverock said.

'Throw In a Good Cook And Start a Restaurant'

DUNCAN — One alderman objected that Duncan's few remaining Chinatown buildings would look out of place if they were moved to the North Cowichan Forest Museum.

Memorial Service

COURTENAY (CP) — About 60 persons Wednesday attended a memorial service for Gerry Johnson of nearby Royston, Texas, Friday night while awaiting a heart transplant operation. He was 43. His wife and two children attended the brief service.

But, countered Ald. L. H. Saunders, council could "throw in a good Chinese cook and establish a restaurant out there."

Mayor Jim Quaife told council the buildings, a long-time tourist attraction, had to be moved because the land they occupy, adjacent to the law courts building, is needed for the next phase of downtown development.

Following a report by committee chairman R. H. Benzie, a suggestion was made that the city follow up a request by former mayor Jack Dobson that the old buildings be moved to the museum "to protect our Chinese heritage" and "because that's where museum pieces belong."

Ald. Saunders said he was afraid if action wasn't taken soon "we might lose them to fire like Nanaimo did." And one alderman recalled that the Chinese played an important part in the early logging industry.

The matter was referred to committee for further discussion.

Liberals 'Also Need Beefing Up'

DUNCAN — It's not the opposition ranks that need beefing up but more Liberals from the west to stress the area's importance to the Pacific rim," Liberal candidate Eric Winch said Wednesday.

Mr. Winch said that only 26 of the 68 members in the House from west of the Great Lakes were Liberals.

"There is a need for a good strong opposition in the Commons," Mr. Winch said. "But the future of Canada lies in great part through our participation in Pacific trade."

"The only way that participation will be heard in Liberal caucus is through another strong voice from the west," he said.

Mr. Winch also said that the "issues in the forthcoming Feb. 10 byelection in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands are starting to firm up."

"NDP leader Tommy Douglas is taking his usual position, criticizing the government and making promises he knows he will not be called upon to fulfill," said Mr. Winch.

New Harbormaster

NANAIMO (CP) — Capt. W. H. Hill has been named Nanaimo's harbormaster, succeeding John Dunham, formerly harbormaster and port manager. Mr. Dunham is to devote all his time to his job as port manager for the Nanaimo Harbor Commission.

WORK COMPLETED DESPITE WEATHER

DUNCAN — Despite the harsh weather, extensive work was carried out by parks, city works, waterworks, sewers, and library departments during December, city council was told.

A total of 39 loads of hog fuel were dumped in a low park area and cleanup was done at Kinsmen, McAdam and Memorial Parks and on boulevards. Chain link fence was placed at Kinsmen Park.

Two sewer connections were made at Pioneer Park to connect to the municipal sewer system. The parks crew was used on road work and snow removal.

Trunk Road widening continued with fences and poles moved back into line. B.C. Telephone moved poles into the sidewalk area on Burdick Street and placed underground piping on Canada Avenue between Ingram and James Streets.

SNOW REMOVED

Streets were plowed, sanded and snow hauled away with assistance of hired equipment. Street sweeping was done on a reduced scale and when weather permitted. Brush was cut at the end of Lomas Street and Prevost Road.

Two water services were installed during December and a six-inch water line on Gibbins Road was extended more than 1,000 feet to take care of a new subdivision going in at the west end of the city water main.

Cold weather caused a number of night calls so water could be shut off to allow plumbers to make repairs. One break in a six-inch main on Mary Street caused basement flooding in the middle of the night.

"The occupants haven't made a complaint yet," engineer Frank Hayes reported.

Three sewer services were installed and maintenance was done on the Third Street sewer pumps.

A bulwark of gravel and rock was built between the city lagoon dykes and the new lagoon dykes of North Cowichan to stop flooding on Trunk Road.

Some work was done on clearing new growth of bullrushes from the lagoon area. Duncan branch of Vancouver Island Regional Library, closed only two days because of heat failure, circulated 9,424 books.

Duncan RCMP were also busy in December. Five persons were injured in four accidents while another 16 accidents investigated involved property damage each in excess of $100. Fifty-seven hazardous moving violations and one juvenile warning notice were issued.

The detachment vehicles travelled 2,564 miles and radar equipment was in operation 10 and one-half hours. City of Duncan received $4,347 in fines.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some faint horizontal lines and small dark spots, possibly due to age or handling. The left edge of the page is bound into a dark, textured material, which appears to be the inner cover or binding of the book. The overall tone is warm and slightly off-white.

Uproar Spreads On Bed Needs For Hospitals

Charges of "foot dragging" in provision of additional hospital beds here Wednesday ignited a spate of comment on where the blame lies.

Besides the regional hospital board, fingers today were pointed, at the provincial government and at individual hospital boards.

Mike Griffin, former alderman and member of St. Joseph's Hospital board of directors, said it was unfair to blame the district board.

"The individual hospital boards haven't made applications to extend the fields of operation they intend to widen. No board has done this, I fail to see where the district board merits this criticism."

He was referring to charges made by Oak Bay alderman and Victoria physician, Dr. G. Scott Wallace. Dr. Wallace said ratemakers approved a referendum last October providing funds for 600 extended care beds, to relieve the pressure on acute care hospitals. He blamed the regional board for delays.

The first-mentioned sites for expansion were Gorge Road Hospital, Mount St. Mary's Hospital and St. Mary's Priory.

Long Battle
 Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich, president of the regional hospital district board's political advisory committee, blamed delays on the provincial health department.

He said, "There's no question of the urgency, we've been battling for four years." He said the board was awaiting working drawings from the provincial health department before proceeding with architect's drawings.

Mayor Cumming thought the health department drawings would be ready by the end of January.

Thomas Bradley, Resthaven Hospital administrator said the regional hospital board should not be held up by these drawings.

The board should already have presented the minister of health with definite proposals, he said. He backed Dr. Wallace in his criticisms.

Doctors Alarmed
 Victoria Medical Society president Dr. Paul Gareau also lined up with Dr. Wallace. "I am alarmed, all doctors are. We've all got patients trying to get into hospital."

Dr. Gareau said female surgical cases are having the longest waits for admission, often eight or nine months. Some who are not emergency cases when operations are planned become emergencies before admission.

"It is getting to the situation where more and more admissions are on an emergency basis — which is not good for the health of the community."

He said the medical society is trying to crystallize its thoughts and prepare resolutions to the regional hospital board and is now meeting more often on the question.

Dr. Scott Wallace, whom Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich called "an explosive alderman," erupted again today.

He said Mayor Curtis, chairman of the regional hospital committee, was "waffling" when it was revealed Wednesday that a survey shows Victoria has probably the worst hospital waiting lists in Canada.

"Not only was he waffling but his attitude was the height of conceit and complacency. When he was told that we have the worst hospital situation, all he said was 'Oh we know about that.'"

Equal Income Across Canada 'False Aim'
 OTTAWA (CP) — Government should realize that equality of income standards across Canada is probably an impossible goal economically, difficult politically and a false aim socially, says Ottawa economist O. J. Firestone.

In particular, he said at a luncheon meeting today, an attempt by Quebec to reach Ontario's level of average personal incomes is probably unattainable, even though Quebec incomes have been growing at a faster rate than Ontario's during the last decade.

Dr. Firestone, economics professor at Ottawa University and former adviser to the trade and commerce department, addressed the Chartered Institute of Secretaries about regional inequalities in Canada with special emphasis on "the economic gap" between Quebec and Ontario.

New Wheat Variety
 OTTAWA (CP) — A new durum wheat variety called Hercules has been licensed by the federal agriculture department, it was announced today. Developed at the department's Winnipeg research station, its attributes are said to be earlier maturity and shorter stronger straw.

Esquimalt Keeps Using Shut Dump
 Municipal engineer William G. Garry said today Esquimalt will continue to use the major garbage dump on Millstream Road near Langford, which was closed down Tuesday by health officials.

"We will continue to do so until road conditions to the Hartland Road dump have been improved," he said. "Our trucks could not get to the dump Tuesday because of the slippery road and traffic congestion."

The Hartland dump is owned by the Victoria Disposal Company Ltd.

The two Millstream dumps were closed to comply with a Metropolitan Board of Health regulation prohibiting the burning of garbage.

But later in the day they were re-opened by their owners to garbage collectors who were unable to drive up a slippery hill to the Hartland disposal area. More than 40 trucks used the dump.

R. F. Rant, owner of the Highland Sanitary Centre dump, said he would keep his disposal area open until he received an order to shut down.

"The garbage has to be dumped somewhere," he said. "It's got to be collected and disposed of."

The other Millstream dump, owned by W. D. Scafe, was also re-opened.

Mr. Garry said he agreed with senior metro health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread's non-burning regulations.

"But I'm not one who believes that garbage improves by leaving it around homes," he said. "It presents a health hazard. It is better to dump in the wilds than leave it hanging around."

The municipal engineer made it clear he wasn't satisfied with conditions for dumping garbage at the Hartland dump.

Japanese See Deficit With Budget Increase

TOKYO — The government approved Tuesday an $18,700,000,000 general account budget for fiscal 1969, up 15.3 per cent from the 1968 budget. Japan's new fiscal year begins April 1.

The total in Japanese currency, 6,739,500,000,000 yen, compares to last year's budget of 5,818,500,000,000 yen — an increase equivalent to $1,500,000,000.

The government also approved an $8,500,000,000 loan and investment program 14 per cent more than last year's treasury program.

Despite the increases, the budget provides for income tax reductions totalling $417,000,000. Persons in Japan's middle income bracket will be the main beneficiaries.

Revenue from all sources is expected to total $17,300,000,000, leaving a deficit of $1,300,000,000 to be financed through borrowing on the bond market.

Frost Can Help Blooms

By HILDA BEASTALL

The forcing into bloom of shrub branches after frost has touched them is more successful than in seasons when frost is lacking.

This year we should be particularly fortunate since many spring-flowering shrubs are already showing buds.

The white spiraea thunbergii with tiny blossoms set singly all along slender bare canes is one of the earliest of spring, and close behind will come the golden bells of forsythias.

Flowering currant (ribes sanguinea), native to Vancouver Island, blooms in our gardens at the same time as forsythia, but I have never tried forcing it with indoor warmth.

A branch or two of a flowering plum or cherry which is known to be an early variety can be opened early indoors, and also the spectacular blossoms of quince shrubs.

Be prepared for colors of the various kinds of shrub flowers to be a bit different to what they are when opened outdoors.

Brilliant brick-red quince flowers have been known to open a lovely pink indoors; while some plum blossoms are a darker shade than when opening outdoors.

It may be a matter of light intensity, or it may be that the natural food supply is cut off and the blossoms suffer from an imbalance of vitamins and minerals!

Select the branches carefully, looking for flower buds before cutting. Split or crush the bottom two inches of each branch and lay them all in warm water deep enough to cover.

Leave for an hour or so, or until water has cooled, then set the branches into large vases of tepid water and stand in temperature of 70, syringing each day with warm water so that drops of moisture hang from the buds for a while.

These conditions simulate spring weather and will result in flowers opening in three to four weeks at this time of year.

Businessman Stole Church Successfully

By BOB BOWMAN

There are lots of stories in Canadian history about stage-coach and train robbers, but there is one that tops them all. A successful British Columbia businessman once stole a church, and got away with it.

The robbery cannot be pinpointed on any one day, but took place over a period of time beginning in January 1899. The CPR decided to move its divisional point from the lively community of Donald to Revelstoke, 60 miles to the west. This meant the end of Donald because practically everyone there worked for the railway.

St. Peter's Anglican Church at Donald was a remarkable structure built by a famous missionary, Rev. Pat Irwin, known as "Father Pat". It had a belfry in which was a 600-pound bell brought all the way from England, and blessed by a bishop who had come all the way from New Westminster, for the ceremony.

Rufus Kimpston was one of the most successful businessmen in the Kootenays. He and his wife Colina were married in the church at Donald and their two sons were christened there.

When Donald was doomed, they decided to move to Windermere, not Revelstoke, but Mrs. Kimpston was heartbroken about leaving the church, which was supposed to be moved to Revelstoke. So gallant husband, Rufus, told her not to worry. He would get the church for her.

LONG CONTROVERSY
When workmen arrived at Donald to dismantle St.

Peter's, it was not there! Rufus had got ahead of them, taken the church apart carefully and transferred the pieces to Golden by train, and then 100 miles up the Columbia River by barges to Windermere. The loot included not only the church structure but the 600-pound bell, altar, pews, books and Bibles.

On the way the bell was stolen at Golden, and placed in the church there. Rufus tried to get it sent on to Windermere and a controversy raged for five years. As he had the contract to carry the mail, no letters demanding the return of the church reached him, but his letters demanding the return of the bell always went out.

Finally the Anglican Synod made a deal. The church could stay at Windermere if the bell could stay at Golden, and that is the way things are today.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? You want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prize? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Linda Taylor, age 8, of Victoria, for her question:

What kind of fruit is a pomegranate?

Agos ago, the pomegranate was just about the most glamorous fruit in the world. People drew pictures of it and carved its likeness in stone. They even had stories about the famous pomegranate to tell their children. Nowadays we have almost forgotten it because we have so many other fruits to choose from.

In ancient days, pomegranate trees were cherished in royal gardens. They grew in lands around the Mediterranean Sea, where the summers are warm and sunny and the winters are just a little cooler than the summers. Pomegranate trees are very choosy about the weather and they refuse to grow where the winters are cold and snowy. Nowadays, there are pomegranate orchards in many warm parts of the world, and some of their fruit may be shipped to cooler areas where the trees cannot grow.

As a rule, the fruit goes to market in flat boxes, with each pomegranate wrapped in tissue. They look a little like yellowish oranges tinted here and there with rosy pink blushes, but their skins are harder than orange rind and the inside of the fruit is not at all like the inside of an orange. When you cut the shell open, it seems to be stuffed with pretty pink berries. There are lots of juicy little round balls, and each one has a small brown seed in the middle.

Eating a pomegranate is rather a messy job. The pinkish fruit part is too soft and watery to take a proper bite—and every mouthful has lots of seeds. But the taste is wonderfully sweet and tangy. On a warm summer's day, a pomegranate fruit is so refreshing that you do not mind spitting out all those little brown seeds. Where pomegranates are plentiful, people often squeeze out the juicy part of the fruit and use it to make delicious drinks.

Red Blossoms

The pomegranate tree grows as tall as an apple tree, but it is much slimmer and its branches tend to be very skinny. In spring, the tree bursts forth with brilliant red blossoms that fill the air with a flowery perfume. The petals fade and the fruit grows larger during the summer. In the fall, it changes from green to pale yellow. When the yellow is tinged with blotches of blushing pink, the pomegranates are ripe.

There are pomegranates or chard in Spain and North Africa, in Greece and Italy and in many warm countries of Asia. Wild pomegranate trees grow in Pakistan, Afghanistan and northern India. These wild trees are bushy shrubs and their fruits are small and stringy. Agos ago, gardeners began cultivating and improving these wild pomegranates. Travellers took seeds from the improved trees and coaxed them to grow in many warm lands around the world. There is a pomegranate tree in Andy's garden in Southern California.

For a long time, pomegranates were the best orchard trees in the world. The super apples and oranges, peaches and pears were cultivated from wild fruit trees. These fruits had fewer seeds and more pulp than the pomegranate. Besides, most of these orchard trees were not so choosy about where they lived. Apples and pears, peaches and plums grow in places where the winters are snowy and frosty. When fall comes, they just shed their leaves and wait for the spring.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Brenda Martz, age 12, of Montgomery, Alabama, for her question:

What causes warts?

A real wart is not the same as a callus that forms to protect a chafed heel or an overworked patch of skin on a finger. It is caused by an unfriendly virus that sets up housekeeping inside a cell in the surface layer of the skin. The virus multiplies and forces the surrounding cells to build thick pads of horny tissue. The wart may be a hard, flat module, a round bump or a mass of little cauliflower bumps. It is not at all handsome and it may hurt. If the horny material is scratched or broken apart, the viruses inside may escape. Then they can spread to other parts of the body or infect the skin of another person.

The average wart may go away by itself after perhaps a few weeks. If it stays too long, or shows signs of swelling, the patient should take it to a doctor. He may cauterize it or treat it with X-rays. Home treatment for warts is not recommended. And the doctor can assure the patient that the wart is caused by a virus. It was not, as many people think, caused by touching the bumpy skin of a toad.

Book-Lover Wins Atlas

A set of World Book Encyclopedia was won today by Linda Taylor, 1850 Townley Street, for a question submitted to Ask Andy and answered on today's page.

Eight years old and a grade three pupil at Richmond Elementary School, Linda likes all her subjects and is especially fond of art and reading.

Linda shows her appreciation for books by working in the school library every Tuesday at noon and after school.

Her other activities include skating, swimming and piano. She is also a Brownie—a member of the 18th Victoria Pack.

She was surprised to know she won the prize.

"It came just in time," she said. "It will help me with my research project on the Congo."

It isn't the first time members of the Taylor family won an Ask Andy prize. Linda's brother, Alan, won a World Book Atlas last year.

Fishing Strike Hits Iceland

REYKJAVIK (Reuters)—Iceland's fishing industry—mainstay of the economy—ground to a halt today as the country's 2,000 seamen went on an indefinite strike.

The striking men are members of the Icelandic Seamen's Union and man the country's fishing vessels and mercantile fleet.

The union has demanded ship-owners pay for crews' food to make up for the increased living costs brought about by devaluation earlier this winter.

The demand is equivalent to 30-per-cent pay increase.

Youth of France and Quebec Encouraged to Become One

PARIS (CP)—Life in the office at 5 Rue de Logelbach, a brief subway ride from the Arc de Triomphe, combines athletic bustle with the kind of zeal usually associated with working for a cause.

A Quebec flag flanked by the insignia of last year's Winter Olympics at Grenoble stands on a table in the visitors' waiting room.

Pretty girls and vigorous-looking young men maintain a quiet whirl of activity in what their debonair office chief calls the cause of "French-language solidarity."

The man in charge is Jean-Claude Quoylet, 35, once an aide to France's youth minister and now general secretary of the Franco-Quebec Office for Youth or Office Franco-Quebecois pour la jeunesse.

In action since last April, his agency forms a key part of plans for co-operation between France and Quebec which have attracted much attention since the controversial 1967 visit to Canada by President Charles de Gaulle.

Quoylet estimates that about 4,000 young people will be involved in exchanges undertaken by his organization in 1968.

He and other French enthusiasts for the project express fervent interest in Quebec's abundance of space and fresh air, ingredients prized after by sports-minded Europeans.

In return, they feel France has much to offer Quebec in methods of organizing youth activities and leisure generally.

And the exchange planners also speak of how the young travellers will be able to learn about the general problems, culture and qualities of one another's homelands and the techniques employed in their respective crafts or professions across the Atlantic.

The philosophy behind the Franco-Quebec office is anything but a simple matter of good fellowship. It is in fact a familiar doctrine in France's age of de Gaulle—"franco-phonie."

The organization defines its ultimate object as ensuring that young people who speak French become increasingly aware of their responsibilities towards one another, in a circle which has ceased to be that of any nation and has become instead a "community of word and spirit."

Quoylet himself calls his office "une institution de solidarité francophone."

Costs of the undertaking in 1969 should amount to about $1,500,000, shared equally by the French and Quebec governments.

Quoylet said in an interview that the youth enterprise in no way conflicts with the jurisdiction of Canada's federal government.

And he added that division of power within the organization is equal as between Quebec and Paris, the office having headquarters in both capitals.

Though he, a Frenchman, is general secretary, the administrative council is divided into equal groups representing France and Quebec.

"A Quebecer, Jean-Marie L'Allier, is joint general secretary of the organization. Asked whether English-speaking Quebecers could benefit from the exchange plans, Quoylet said this would be the case to the extent that the youths concerned had mastered the French language.

The Franco-Quebec office pays 60 per cent of the travelling and other expenses of the young persons shuttling between France and Quebec under itsegis.

P.M. Meet Saves Face, Little Else

By PETER NEWMAN

LONDON — The face-saving
Commonwealth
Prime Ministers' Conference here
Wednesday
ganization
with a realistic definition of its worth
but a questionable potential for its future.

Newman

The inconclusive debates of
the last 10 days which managed to fuz up most of the bilateral problems facing the nations involved have defined
the Commonwealth for what it is: a kind of Old Boys Club
whose members have little in common except for their club
membership and whose most enthusiastic participants are
those who find it most difficult to adapt themselves to
the adult world outside.

The moment that best caught the mood of the conference occurred at a private dinner given for his fellow delegates by Harold Wilson on the evening of Jan. 9.

'Here's To Us'

When the British prime minister rose to toast the glittering company, he raised
his glass of champagne and

simply said, "To us!" The assembled heads of state,
many of whom had spent the week attacking Wilson's policies, cheered him to a man.

It is this kind of camaraderie, this feeling of belonging, rather than any specific commitment to action that binds the Commonwealth
together.

The ephemeral idea that the Commonwealth might become a community of nations
able to interpose itself as an
ameliorating "third force"
between the main poles of
power in the world has vanished in bubbles of diplomatic doubletalk.

Although the conference's
final communique bravely
hinted that there had been
some degree of unanimity
among the prime ministers
who attended, it contained

First Session Opens Saturday

PARIS (CP)—The long-stalled Vietnam peace talks
are to begin Saturday, eight months after the preliminary discussions got under way.
With the consent of their allies, the United States
and North Vietnam announced today a breakthrough
in the filibuster about the shape of the table the negotiators will use.

More than two months of haggling over the diplomatic geometry of the enlarged talks—who
will sit where—came to an end
when the Americans announced
the terms of the settlement.

The American delegation announced at a news conference
that the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and
the Viet Cong will sit down to bargain at a solid round table
flanked at mid-points by two smaller rectangular tables.

There will be a distance of approximately 18 inches separating each of the rectangular tables from the circular table.
The compromise was designed to get around a conflict between the descriptions used
by the parties to the talks.

Washington and Saigon call
the talks two-sided while Hanoi
and the Viet Cong insist they
are four-sided, thus claiming independent status for the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

NLF NOT RECOGNIZED
The South Vietnamese government in Saigon and the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris
made similar announcements at
news conferences.

Chief Hanoi spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le said North Vietnam and the NLF still considered the talks four-sided.

"There will be four independent delegations at the opening meeting," he said. "Each delegation will be equal and independent."

Foreign Minister Tran Chanh
Thanh of South Vietnam made
the announcement in Saigon,
and said there was no change in
the U.S. and Saigon government positions on their refusal to recognize the NLF.

VANCE, LAU AGREE
Agreement was reached in dealings between the deputy
head of the American delegation, Cyrus Vance, and his
North Vietnamese counterpart,
Col. Hau Van Lau.

Vance and Lau, with the agreement of their respective allies, also agreed that there would be no flags or nameplates
inside the conference room and
that the American-South Vietnamese side would speak first,
an American spokesman said.

The procedural breakthrough,
coming four days before the end
of the Johnson administration,
represented a major achievement for outgoing American negotiators W. Averell Harriman
and Vance.

The talks will get under way
the day before Harriman returns to the United States.
His replacement, Henry Cabot
Lodge, is expected to arrive
here several days after president-elect Nixon is inaugurated
Jan. 20.

Johnson Hails Agreement

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson hailed today the Paris agreement on the shape
of a Vietnam conference table
and said that now "new talks on the substance of peace in Southeast Asia can open."

Johnson said the United States should be confident that an honorable settlement in Vietnam will be achieved.

"We are all pleased that certain basic procedural problems
in Paris have been solved and
new talks on the substance of peace in Southeast Asia can
open," he said in a statement.

Johnson said that three lessons are to be learned from the United States experience since
he announced a cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam.

"First, we must be clear and
firm pursuing with our allies
the limited but vital objectives
we seek in Southeast Asia.

"Second, we must be patient
and face the hard fact that fighting is likely to continue as
the negotiations are carried forward.

"Third, we should be confident that an honorable peace is possible if we here at home remain steady."

The president, obviously delighted that the way was open
for actual peace negotiations by
a decision to seat the rival delegations at a round table in Paris, went on to say that there have been three crises since the preliminary discussions opened
in the French capital nine months ago. He said these were
on a place for the talks, on
terms for the bombing cessation, and on procedures for the new talks.

"In each case," the chief executive said, "patience, firmness and fair-mindedness
achieved a satisfactory result."

Communication Cut MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp. said today it is expected that a telegraphers' strike will force all public telegraph services in and out of Britain to cease as of midnight Sunday, Jan. 19.

U.S. TROOP WITHDRAWAL 'POSSIBLE'

SAIGON — Premier Tran
Van Huong believes the United States could begin a gradual troop withdrawal of
about 10,000 men a month
without compromising the war, his spokesman said
today.

Bad Driver Crackdown Proposed

Times Legislative Reporter

The provincial government is considering a switch in prosecuting devices which would boost the maximum penalty for driving while licence is suspended from six months to two years.

Attorney-General Leslie
Peterson today indicated such a change may be needed as the keynote to complete the new demerit system for replacing traffic court fines.

Mr. Peterson said his department is considering a policy of prosecuting violators by indictment under the Criminal Code
instead of the present practice
of proceeding by summary
conviction.

This would supplement any action taken by the federal government which Mr. Peterson already has urged to seek amendment of the Criminal Code creating mandatory jail sentences for a second conviction of violating a licence suspension.

He said the tough new attitude towards suspended drivers is "essential" if the new demerit system of the Motor Vehicles Branch is to work.

ULTIMATE WEAPON

The system, under trial in the Greater Victoria area as a prelude to province-wide implementation, relies on licence suspensions as the ultimate weapon in weeding out bad
drivers.

Instead of charging a driver
in traffic court for any of the
"moving offences" in traffic
regulations, violation reports
are sent to the Motor Vehicles
Branch and a certain number of points results in licence suspension for various periods or a requirement that the driver
take a special course.

"There are far too many drivers today driving while their licences are suspended and jeopardizing the lives of law-abiding citizens," Mr. Peterson said.

"If our new system... is to
be effective then it is essential that suspensions be invoked and
that no one dare to violate those suspensions."

Quebec Renews Bid To Control Baby Bonus

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec today renewed its demands
to take over family allowances from the federal government and proposed higher payments for bigger families
as part of a new payment formula.

Quebec Welfare Minister
Jean-Paul Cloutier also told a federal-provincial welfare ministers' conference that the province feels it should have the final word on programs of social assistance, unemployment
insurance and manpower.

He deplored federal silence on
earlier proposals that a continuing intergovernmental conference of welfare and other ministers on social development be set up along with a Canadian council of provincial welfare ministers with a permanent secretariat.

The new family allowance formula should provide bigger payments to families with more than three children, increasing
benefits as children grew older,
changes to keep pace with higher living costs, elimination of income tax exemptions for children, and taxation of family allowances.

He said these factors also
should be considered in relation to financing the new family allowance plan without increasing
taxes and possible withdrawal
of sales tax exemptions on children's wear and transfer of this tax yield to family allowances.

The Cloutier remarks came at
the opening of the conference
after federal Health Minister
John Munro said a tight financial situation means welfare
programs must be continually
renewed to ensure they meet current needs and future requirements.

Mr. Munro emphasized that welfare programs must be administered as effectively and
economically as possible.

PROPOSALS CLASH
The Quebec family allowance
proposal clashed sharply with
federal Health Minister Munro's plea that the conference consider greater selectivity to ensure that benefit payments go to those who really need them.

Mr. Cloutier called for maintenance of a universal family allowance plan, rejecting
"any scheme which would restrict eligibility for benefits to certain families according to income or occupation of the family head."

The two objectives lie behind
proposals to be discussed at the conference for special studies of
public assistance program development and welfare program
costs.

Mr. Munro said the ministers have a common responsibility—to interpret the programs so that government colleagues and the public understand them better.

The growing problem of communicating purpose and delivering service "can be traced to
the growing alienation of people
from institutions and the failure
of many of our institutions to offer opportunities for meaningful participation."

Mr. Munro told a news conference on the eve of the ministerial meetings that he hopes the provinces will agree to a study
of ways to provide a voice for welfare recipients in the administration of programs.

TALKS KILLED BY NIGERIA

LONDON (CP) — Nigeria will refuse to hold unconditional peace talks with Biafra and will meet the "rebels" only to inform them to surrender, Chief Obafemi Awolowo said today.

Awolowo, Nigeria's representative at the now concluded Commonwealth prime ministers meeting, also said there will be no unconditional ceasefire and that unless there is a surrender, Nigeria will pursue the war until the "rebels" are beaten.

Prime Minister Trudeau, at a news conference Wednesday night, said that Nigeria was prepared to negotiate without conditions on ending the civil war and that "certain light and hope" had been brought into the situation.

Trudeau also said that he has instructed his officials to get in touch with Biafran representatives and that "some feelers" had been put out to him to act as mediator in the Nigeria-Biafra struggle.

The Canadian leader, now in Rome, said he hoped Nigeria-Biafra talks would take place in London.

Trudeau's remarks followed a private meeting among the 27 Commonwealth leaders, including Awolowo, which took place at Lancaster House, a former stately home used for government entertainment, just before noon Wednesday.

The meeting was called by Prime Minister Wilson in a fresh effort to bring an end to the Nigerian struggle. Reports following from that meeting suggested that a breakthrough had occurred in bringing the two sides together.

EXPLAINED POSITION

However, Awolowo said the Lancaster meeting was merely a place where he had a chance of explaining to the leaders the Nigerian position on the rebellion after he had refused to allow the Nigerian issue to be placed on the Commonwealth conference agenda.

Asked what would happen if Canada, Zambia or some other country persuades the Biafrans to talk to the Nigerians, Awolowo said at a news conference he would be willing to meet with the Biafrans but only to explain to them that they must give up the struggle.

There is only one basis on which the war can end, he said.
The "rebels" must give up the rebellion and come back to Nigeria. Biafrans have demanded independence and have expressed fear that if they surrender, they will be slaughtered by federal forces.

He said he plans to leave for Lagos Saturday and "while one always lives in hope," he did not know whether the Biafrans would be willing to meet him here before he leaves.

"The war will end," he said,
"only if the Biafrans give up or we defeat them."

Pair Spacewalk to Other Craft

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia
made giant strides in its race
for the moon today—linking up
two manned satellites, transferring two men through space
from one to the other, and un-
linking them again.

It was the first orbital link-up
of two manned craft. The two craft were coupled together for four hours 35 minutes.

The two spacewalkers went
from Soyuz 5—a three-man
craft launched Wednesday—to join a single cosmonaut aboard
Soyuz 4 which was launched
Tuesday.

The two craft linked up earlier today to form what was officially described as the world's first orbiting space station.

An announcement carried by
the Soviet news agency Tass
said Lt.-Col. Yevgeny Khronov,
35, and civilian engineer Alexei
Yeliseyev, 35, made their walks
separately and were each outside the spacecraft for about an hour.

In the Soyuz 4 half of the station they joined Lt.-Col.
Vladimir Shatalov, 41, who
manoeuvred his craft to make
the earlier link-up.

The commander of mission,
Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, remained in Soyuz 5.

Both spacecraft have two compartments and are capable
of carrying several spacemen.

The Russian word Soyuz
means union and observers considered the link-up a key step in Soviet plans to construct a platform in space that could be used as the starting point of a mission to the moon.

The U.S. Gemini program
achieved linkups only with one
manned and one unmanned
ship.

It also was the first time the Soviet Union achieved manual
docking, something the United States has already done. The two previous Soviet dockings
were automatic, between unmanned spaceships.

After the link-up at 11:20 a.m.
(3:30 a.m. EST), Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, captain of the three-man Soyuz 5, took command of the station.

Tass news agency said:
"There was a mutual mechanical coupling of the ships. They were rigidly tightened up and

their electrical circuits were connected."

The announcement said everything was functioning normally and telephone communications were established between the two parts of the station.

The preliminary approach of the two ships was controlled
from the ground and satellites
were within 100 yards of each other when Shatalov took over
manual control.

JOIN OVER USSR

The docking took place during the 34th orbit of Soyuz 4 and the 18th orbit of Soyuz 5. The craft were over the Soviet Union at the time.

Tass said the space station
had four compartments for the
crew and "provided for the implementation of a large series of experiments and investigations,
as well as comfortable conditions for work and rest."

The spacemen reported all the station's systems were operating normally and the cosmonauts were feeling well after
this history-making manoeuvre.
The other two men on the sta-

Lt.-Col. Yevgeny Khronov and civilian flight engineer Alexei Yeliseyev.

Khronov was understudy for
Col. Alexei Leonov, who made
the first ever walk in space in March, 1965.

What justified the official description of the two linked craft
as the world's first orbiting experimental space station was not quite clear.

The Russians have in the past
described some of their un-
manned craft as space stations.
The two craft now on the way
for Venus landings in May

carry this description, as did a Proton research craft launched toward the earth at the end of last year.

The link-up was a new step forward in long-announced Soviet plans to construct an orbit-
ing space platform for trips to
the moon and other planets.

The new first will do much to boost Soviet space morale, lowered by last month's historic
first trip round the moon and back by three U.S. Apollo 8 astronauts.

The official reports did not say how long Soyuz 4 and 5
would be kept locked together.

It's gittin' so space ain't a place y' kin go t' avoid crowds.
Mister Trudeau's findin' thet bein' a prime minister
makes y' a prime target.
Too wet fer snow, too cold fer slush—it's snush.

WORLD PEACE was the main topic
when Prime Minister Trudeau today
visited Pope Paul in Rome for a 40-minute audience. Mr. Trudeau also said that the meeting marked the start of bilateral talks toward establishing diplomatic relations between Canada and the Vatican. He added
that although the Pope would welcome such an exchange he did not press for it. "We will have to explore

Canadian public opinion on this...
Roman Catholic and non-Catholic,"
Mr. Trudeau, who is Roman Catholic,
asked for and received a special blessing from the Pope and was given papal mementos, including a rosary for his mother.

Arthur Mayse

Florenda Joy Dick, the bright and lively six-year-old who carries a time-bomb in her chest, knows that a long trip has been planned for her. She is a brave little girl, and accepts the need for repairs to her heart.

Her worry is mostly for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Dick, of 355 Gorge Road.

The other day, she turned from playing with Velvet, the tiny, perk-eared family pup, and went to stand by her father.

"I know you're going to miss me," she said. Then she looked up at the tall man and gravely offered reassurance.

"Daddy, I'll be coming back."

But the sorry fact is that unless help is offered, their daughter may never make that essential journey to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn.

Under arrangements made last year, and not yet cancelled Florenda Joy and her mother are to leave Victoria toward the end of February for Rochester. The child would be admitted to the clinic on March 2.

The following day, she would undergo catheterization, an exploratory procedure that provides the equivalent of a blueprint for the surgeon.

On March 10, as the schedule stands, Mayo's Dr. Dwight McGoon will operate.

Dr. Ronald J. Forth, consultant in heart diseases who came to Victoria after a number of years at Mayo Clinic, defined Florenda Joy's problem to me as a combination of two congenital heart anomalies—a circumstance that places her in a rare category, and vastly increases the risks of repair.

She has a hole between the two ventricles (lower cavities) of her heart. This leads to leakage of blood from the left side of her heart to the right. Blood is diverted from its normal circuit of the body; a constant work-load is imposed on the left side of the heart, and the blood vessels of the lungs are bombarded with a greatly abnormal flow.

The result is cumulative wear and tear on the lung, and progressive obstruction of its blood vessels. In Florenda's case, this "plugging" is not yet so far advanced that blood can't get through.

Let that happen, and the end begins.

The second anomaly is harder for a layman to explain. The large blood vessels and the ventricular chambers of her heart are flushtly transposed.

Florenda Joy, as I write this, will be toddling off to bed with doll and teddybear. Presently dog Velvet, if undetected, will steal up to join the crew.

Tonight, the future rests lightly on this youngest of the children whom David and Sadie Dick hold dear.

Let her peak of condition pass, and she will never again be so fit for the operation which can change that future. And if the March date can't be met, it may be a considerable time before another opening at Mayo Clinic comes up.

I hope she will be spared to grow up, and perhaps one day to marry, and to have children of her own. All these are possible. Only lack of money to bring them about stands in the way. Hospital Insurance and Medicare grants will help defray the cost, but a sizeable sum remains.

So I turn to you, on behalf of a little girl and her family, in the hope that you will help save a life through a crash rescue.

Times city editor Lloyd Baker and I have opened a bank account in trust for Florenda Joy Dick. We will welcome contributions from any person, organization or school.

At this point, I can't suggest a precise target, but when a figure is worked out, will let you know. The cost will certainly run to several thousand dollars.

In honesty, I must also warn you that the Mayo team faces a very difficult, and perhaps even impossible task. Success cannot be guaranteed.

Teacher Lyn Hancock goes so far as to use Dr. Spock as children learn responsible care of Gypsy, feeding her formula, gently weighing and measuring her as they chart her growth. And they are even writing poetry about her. Admiring her here are (left to right)

Larry Shimmin, Dorcas Hawes and Norman Randall. Gibbon was turned over to Lyn's husband David, operator of the Wildlife Conservation Centre on Island View Beach, by Tacoma zoo after little beast was rejected by her mother, who broke her arm. Gypsy is housed in an incubator at school, rides on a hot-water bottle in the car when she goes home with Mrs. Hancock each night.

'Retain Marijuana Penalties'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson today said he favors retaining stiff penalties for marijuana offenders.

But he would not go along with suggestions that the death penalty be imposed on three-time drug traffickers.

The minister said his concern with marijuana use is that it might lead to the use of "hard drugs."

These drugs, such as heroin, amphetamines and LSD can lead to "more difficult situations"—addictions and physical dependence—he said.

His disagreement with the death penalty follows an earlier statement by Health Minister Ralph Lofmark who said the idea was raised at a meeting of provincial health ministers.

15 TO 20 YEARS

Possibilities mentioned were sentences of 15 to 20 years for second offenders and the death penalty for third offenders.

While some difference of opinion exists "as to the harmful effects of marijuana," Mr. Peterson said he did not know whether arguments favoring milder treatment of first offenders stemmed from a "valid point of view."

Current federal legislation sets penalties for drug offences from a six-month minimum to seven years.

Criticism of the law has come from such people as Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen who, in his inaugural address earlier this month, said "to crucify a young life because of one moment of idle curiosity and experiment seems to me a mockery of social purpose."

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me where I can get a calendar with the changes of the moon on it?—A.C.

A. The major stationery shops in town will be able to supply these.

Q. So that I can hear the other side of the story would you give me the address of an English-language Soviet publication which carries articles on world events.—M.

A. You can get a year's subscription to Soviet Union Today, a monthly pictorial magazine for $1.40 by writing to the USSR Embassy in Canada, 161 Augusta St., Ottawa 2.

They will also be able to tell you where Soviet dailies in English are published in North America.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve controversies or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

City Man Dead Two Injured In Collision

A Victoria man was killed and two companions injured Wednesday in a head-on collision on the Alaska Highway, 145 miles north of Fort Nelson, B.C.

William Zelnic, 45, of 654 Baxter St., died in the mishap. Borden Zuck, 48, of 309 Arnold St., and Bruno Boggi, who lives at the Cherry Bank Hotel, are in satisfactory condition in Fort Nelson hospital.

Mr. Zuck's wife, Laura, said the men were travelling together on a business trip in the area.

Mr. Zelnic was employed as chief steward at the Empress Hotel; Mr. Boggi is an assistant chef at the Empress; Mr. Zuck operates the Central Texaco service station at Douglas and Carey.

City to Start Meal Service For Needy

City residents hampered by age or illness may soon get a hot dinner delivered to their door for 50 cents.

The "Meals on Wheels" program could mean doctors would release some patients from hospital—sooner, thus freeing badly-needed hospital beds, Ald. Lily Wilson said this morning.

She persuaded council's finance committee to endorse a $500 grant for the project, to buy insulated cabinets which would hold the hot dinners on trays.

"This is not a charity," said Mrs. Wilson. "It's a service for those who need it."

A committee of people from churches, welfare services and the Silver Threads are organizing the project.

It will begin with volunteers manning four cars to deliver the meals. The charge will be a minimum 50 cents, paid on delivery, but customers will be free to pay more if they can afford it.

The service is for those who can't get out to shop or about to prepare their own meals, said Mrs. Wilson. Many older people can and the senior citizens' centre now serves up to 150 meals a day.

Dayliner, Crane Crash

A collision between the E and N Railway Dayliner and a Defence Department mobile crane today delayed departure of the railway passenger carrier.

The collision took place at a level crossing at Munro Head, beyond the Esquimalt graving dock. No one was hurt and damage to both vehicles was said to be light.

Esquimalt police reported at noon no knowledge of the accident. The Dayliner, after returning to the station for inspection, set out again on its trip north.

$281,900 Saving In Debt Charges

By DON VIPOND

An "imaginative" capital financing plan proposed by city treasurer Jim Bramley would save Victoria $281,900 in interest charges.

The plan takes advantage of a dramatic drop in the city's long-term loan repayments in 1975, the year a 30-year refinancing program ends.

That year the annual debt charges plummet from $1,058,244 to $414,265 and Mr. Bramley proposed to council's finance committee this morning that current borrowing for building be tailored for repayment in full at that time.

It means that this year the city would scrap selling the traditional 20-year debentures municipalities use in borrowings and replace them with an issue with a 7½-year term.

The idea hits at current high interest rates on this sort of loan and the treasurer believes it would save the city money two ways.

First, the shorter term debentures would be more marketable and therefore sell at a lower interest rate. And second, interest would be paid over a shorter period.

If the $645,000 needed for the fourth year of the city's capital budget program were borrowed on the proposed basis, interest on the loan would total $387,000. On the traditional 20-year debenture basis interest would add up to $668,900.

Mr. Bramley explained following the meeting that the curious drop in the city's annual debt payments in 1975 originated in 1937 when Victoria refinanced all of a series of ancient debts on a 30-year repayment program. In 1945 an opportunity arose to refinance the debt again and this is the program which will be paid in full in six years.

Dodged Japanese Patrols More Than Two Months

By PETE LOUDON

One of the most exciting stories to come out of the war in the Pacific ended here this week with the death of Lieutenant Commander Ian Ernest Alcock, 54.

It came to light as the Times sought to correct the original death notice which claimed Cdr. Alcock had won a Distinguished Service Cross in the Second World War while serving with the Royal Canadian Navy in the Far East Theatre.

FUNERAL HELD AT ESQUIMALT

Funeral services with participation by the Canadian Armed Forces took place at St. Paul's Church, Esquimalt, today for Lieut. Commander Ian Ernest Alcock.

He is survived by his wife Beatrice at home, 2464 Windsor Road, Oak Bay; a son Philip at home, and a brother Harvey at 11 Eaton St. Padre J. A. Roberts officiated.

The story tells how he and several teammates had been brought in by submarine and sent in small canoes to reconnoitre beaches where

Weather? Anything Can Happen

Freezing temperatures were forecast for Victoria again tonight but daytime melting is expected to once more rid the streets of snow.

A few showers of snow may occur but weather officials say they should be less frequent.

"A little improvement seems to be shaping" said a weather official. Then he cautioned that cold air is still hanging over the province and while it resists "anything can happen."

Melting conditions were expected to be general today with south-west winds and temperatures nudging 36 at the airport. In Victoria tonight they will drop to 32 near the waterfront and in the other areas, the mid-twenties.

Meantime, up-Island and elsewhere in B.C., snow continues to pile up.

Port Alberni has 36 inches on the ground. Tofino, where snow seldom appears, received a new five inches and now has 16 inches in the town. Nanaimo has 11 inches, Comox one inch and at Vancouver an additional two inches brought the depth to five inches at the airport.

Local municipalities sent out sanding crews overnight and roads were slidy. Ice was still evident on the Malahat despite plowing. Several cars were reported ditched Wednesday.

Elderly Woman Found In Gorge

Esquimalt police today recovered the body of an elderly woman floating face down in the Gorge just below the Tillicum Bridge.

The body was first noted near the shoreline just after 12:30 p.m. and recovered a half-hour later.

No details on who the woman was or how long she had been in the water were available at press time.

Legislation Planned For B.C. Skyscraper

The government will introduce legislation at the coming session to enable construction of its planned skyscraper in downtown Vancouver, Public Works Minister W. N. Chant indicated today.

He said drilling surveys have proved that the whole block site, next to the Vancouver courthouse, is strong enough "to support a building of the weight we plan."

He refused to tell reporters how big the structure will be but previous reports said it would rise 55 stories and Premier Bennett "claimed it would be the tallest building in Canada."

There has been no estimate of

$78,000 Costs At Mt. Finlayson

A man who pleaded guilty today to firing tracer bullets which are blamed for starting a $78,000 fire on Mount Finlayson, was fined $100.

Brian A. Watson, working as a surveyor's assistant in Dawson Creek and believed to be in his early twenties, was charged with starting a fire August 4 last year which raged over 130 acres of bush land in the Malahat area.

He did not appear in court and was represented by Sean Howard.

Prosecutor George MacMinn said an investigation of the fire showed the accused had been firing tracer bullets from west to east in the area.

He said the fire took a week to extinguish and many men were employed in putting it out.

In answering a question from Magistrate J. A. Byers he said it was not the fire two Victoria pilots were fighting when their water bomber clipped a tree and crashed near Shawnigan Lake Aug. 8. They were both killed.

Mr. Howard said Watson had inherited a .303 rifle from his grandfather—and was firing tracer bullets in the evening. He said the accused was not aware a fire had started at that time.

He said Watson was on his father's property and firing across the inlet.

"It's an accepted practice in that area to fire rifles," he said, but he should have known more about tracer bullets.

"It was a foolish, stupid thing to do but there was no intent to start a fire."

At the time of the fire officials said they suspected a careless smoker was responsible.

Another fire in the same area in the summer of 1967 claimed the life of another two pilots when their bomber crashed on Skirt Mountain near Goldstream.

The magistrate quipped "It's not very much if you say it quickly" when told of the fire fighting costs.

Court Told Of 'Long Day' Celebrations

Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford used to celebrate June 21 as the anniversary of picnics he said he had in England with Sir Winston Churchill and the Viceroy of India, it was stated in British Columbia Supreme Court today.

Witnesses said Mr. Ford told them the picnics were always held on the longest day of the year (June 21). They were among his happiest memories and he liked to celebrate them by going into the country every June 21.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. McKay, formerly of Victoria, told how Mr. Ford invited them to a private dinner at East Sooke in memory of "the picnics."

It was held in an East Sooke restaurant on June 21, 1955.

PRETENSE

"Mr. Ford pretended he was Churchill while I was supposed to be the viceroy of India," said Mr. McKay, a director of the Exchange Building in Victoria, now resident in Vancouver.

Mrs. McKay, who followed her husband onto the witness stand, said she couldn't remember what role she was asked to play at the dinner. She recalled that Mr. Ford was dressed in "old-fashioned country clothes."

Mr. and Mrs. McKay testified that Mr. Ford told highly dramatic stories and enjoyed having an audience. He impressed them as "a lonely man," living alone in a big house at 1012 Terrace Avenue (near Oak Bay Junction). He often spoke of his son John, in Melbourne, Australia, as "my son."

Mr. and Mrs. McKay gave evidence at the sixth day of a trial to determine the validity of a will made by Mr. Ford in 1958. (He died Oct. 26, 1967).

John Douglas Ford of Melbourne is contesting the will on the ground that his father was of unsound mind and suffering from delusions, including a delusion that he was not his son.

Under the 1958 will, Mr. Ford Jr. receives $50,000 while most of the remainder of the estate goes to Victoria charities.

He asks that an earlier will, made in 1933, be declared valid. Under this will, Mr. Ford would get the entire estate with the exception of bequests to charity totalling $350,000.

Death Recalls Wartime Jungle Struggle

By PETE LOUDON

Old sailors know the Canadian navy didn't figure in the Pacific war. It was found that Commander Alcock, then a lieutenant, won his "gong" while on loan to the Royal Navy.

EXPLOITS DESCRIBED

This is the way his exploits were described in The Far Distant Ships, by naval historian Joseph Schull:

"Of the hundreds (of Canadians) who served with the Royal Navy on combined operations, perhaps the one with the most unusual story to tell was a red-haired, scrawny, fever-ridden spectre who staggered out of a Malayan jungle on August 23, 1945."

"He was identified as Lieut. Ian Alcock, missing since June 8, and the supposed source of mysterious signals which had been emanating from the interior fastnesses of the Malayan underground."

BROUGHT IN BY SUB

The story tells how he and several teammates had been brought in by submarine and sent in small canoes to reconnoitre beaches where

later allied landings were planned.

Lieut. Alcock's was one of four canoes and his paddler was a British sailor named Turner. They prowled under the noses of unseeing Japanese sentries but their observation took too long. They could not get back to the sub before daylight.

They decided to beach the canoe and hide it and seek out Malaysian underground forces in the jungle. Their trek took 48 hours and once they passed so close to a Japanese post they could see enemy soldiers asleep. They themselves had no sleep and only a minimum of food.

They found two more of their party already at the camp of the Malays and Chinese. The four were received with great suspicion.

They were passed from post to post through miles of jungle for two weeks before meeting a senior Chinese officer. Alcock was permitted to write a signal telling of his position and he was assured it would be sent to the British forces.

The Chinese officer, who controlled a force of 10,000 guerrillas, asked him also to arrange for an air drop of arms and ammunition. He was certain they would enable him to clear the Japanese out of Malaya.

The signal went out and later some of the arms arrived.

But in the interim Japanese patrols forced Lieut. Alcock and his party to move on.

There were weeks of marching and hiding, fever and jungle sores. Men fell by the wayside where rescue parties later saved them. But Lieutenant Alcock kept going, though feverish and distrustful of his guides.

MISERY, FEAR

One day, toward the end of July he was given a message from a British detachment already established in Malaya telling him to make for Megri-Jembalan on the west coast.

Three more weeks of misery and fear dodging Japanese patrols and then he saw a British ship.

Delirious almost, he learned the great news, the last of the enemy were being mopped up. And the war had been officially over for more than a week.

FATHER ALSO EXPERIENCED CLOSE CALL WITH DISASTER

Sea stories seem to run in the Alcock family.

The father of Lieut. Commander Ian Alcock was Capt. Ernest Alcock and in the final phases of the First World War he also had a brush with death in the Pacific.

Capt. Alcock, who died here in 1954, was chief officer aboard HMCS Galliano, a Royal Canadian Navy patrol vessel which was lost near the Queen Charlottes in 1918.

Capt. Alcock was taken to hospital with "flu" the night before Galliano sailed. A rip in her plates caused her to sink and all 47 persons aboard were drowned.
